NEW THAW DISCLOSURES

WIFE SAYS BLAKE IS IDEAL MAN

Following a declaration in New York today by Mrs. Joseph A. Blake, who has brought suit for $1,000,000 against Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, charging alienation of the affections of Dr. Blake, the noted surgeon, that Dr. Blake "is the best man God ever made," Arthur C. Train, counsel for Mrs. Mackay, is at Portland, Me., to urge his client to help bring about a reconciliation between the Blakes.

If Dr. Blake returns to his family his wife will withdraw her suit against Mrs. Mackay.

Mrs. Blake absolves her husband from all blame for the peculiar domestic tangle which resulted in the wrecking up of her home. She does not want monetary damages from Mrs. Mackay; she wants her husband to return to his home.

"Best Man God Ever Made."

These developments were obtained today from the authorized spokesman for Mrs. Blake. They followed a remarkable interview given by Mrs. Blake to the AMERICAN.

Mrs. Blake was asked as to the possibility of a reconciliation. She said:

"Dr. Blake is the best man God ever made. I lived with him for twenty-one years and I should know. He is a man of the highest ideals. No woman ever had a more devoted husband.

"Dr. Blake is a New Haven man. He came to New York a stranger to the leaders of his profession. He inherited a wonderful intellect, and he worked hard. He succeeded on absolute merit.

"Not only in technique, but in science," she continued, "he became the greatest surgeon in New York. Yes, why shouldn't I say the whole truth? He became the greatest surgeon in the world. He had all the world at his feet."

"It Is Killing Me."

"I have known him all my life. His great achievements, his devotion to me and to our dear boys made me so happy. Then this thing—this terrible thing—happened. I cannot stand it. It is killing me. These things they are saying about the man I love, the best man God ever made."

There was a break in the interview.

"I cannot say more," Mrs. Blake sobbed. "I have never said one word reflecting on him. He is my husband. He is the greatest man God ever made, and the best. Say that for me, won't you? Say that I said it. He is my husband."

"I am now going to Mr. Baffle's office and I will ask him what I shall do. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, rector of St. Thomas', is my pastor. He could tell you how I have suffered. But I must see Mr. Baffle. He must permit me to say some word in defense of my husband."

When Mrs. Blake was asked if her son,

Club Considers Gardner's Request

Republican leaders met as members of the Massachusetts Republican Club today to discuss Congressman Gardner's request that the club assume the management of his campaign. If the request is granted Mr. Gardner's campaign will be taken from the Republican State Committee, of which Charles E. Hatfield is chairman.

Sentence Dorchester Man.

James F. Fitzgerald of Buttonwood street, Dorchester, was given eleven months in the House of Correction in the Municipal Court today on the charge of stealing fifty-nine yards of cloth from the Bay State Cloth Cleaning Company, No. 102 Arch street, and also for assaulting several persons on Shawmut avenue while he and an accomplice, who got away, were being placed under arrest.

ELLIOTT DISCUSSES 'SERVICES'

Chairman Frederick J. Macleod of the Massachusetts Public Service Commission announced today that at the conclusion of the New Haven $67,000,000 bond issue hearing the commission would begin a thorough investigation of the New Haven's "other expenses" fund. Who got this money and why will be probed to the limit.

The Boston AMERICAN wired President Elliott of the New Haven Railroad five vitally important questions regarding the $237,000 spent by the New Haven and which the road casually listed as "other expenses" in its report to the Public Service Commission. There was no explanation of this enormous expenditure until it was demanded by the commission. Though the board demanded the detailed expenses, in its report the New Haven submitted an accounting covering but $101,336.39 of the total.

In reply to the AMERICAN'S five questions, President Elliott has made specific answer to each in a telegram to the editor of this newspaper.

The questions and replies follow:

Q.—Do you believe that a railroad should spend the money of its stockholders in an effort to influence by underground means legislation and public opinion?

A.—I do not believe in spending large sums of money or any sums in any improper manner to secure legislation and accelerate public opinion. I think railroads have a right and a duty to present the actual facts to the public and to make arguments in a frank and open manner before members of legislatures or others, and this will be my plan. For legitimate services incident to this work reasonable compensation must be paid. I DO NOT BELIEVE THE MONEY OF THE COMPANY SHOULD BE SPENT TO INFLUENCE BY UNDERGROUND METHODS LEGISLATURES AND PUBLIC OPINION, AND IT WILL NOT BE SO SPENT BY THIS COMPANY.

Q.—Have you ever in your railroad experience found it necessary for a railroad to deal so with the public?

A.—I have never pursued this plan in my dealings with the public.

Q.—The New Haven Railroad spent $537,000 of its stockholders' money between December 1, 1912, and June 30 in payment for underground services of this kind. Do you approve of this?

A.—I was not an officer of the company until September 1 and have no knowledge of the transactions mentioned by you.

To Make Open Application.

Q.—It has been common knowledge, now confirmed by the report just filed with the Public Service Commission, that the New Haven was always glad to present working newspaper men, magazine writers, editors of small struggling weeklies, members of the Legislature and corridor lobby-

TELL OF SULZER CHECKS

ALBANY, Sept. 26.—Henry Morgenthau, treasurer of the National Democratic Committee and newly appointed ambassador to Turkey, testified today before the court of impeachment which is trying Governor William Sulzer on charges of high crimes and misdemeanors, that Sulzer, after being impeached by the Assembly, urged him (Morgenthau) to treat his campaign contribution of $1000 as a purely personal matter.

"On September 2, Mr. Sulzer called me up and asked me to come to Albany," said Mr. Morgenthau. "I did not think it right to come, so he asked me, if I was called upon to testify at the impeachment trials, to be easy on him. I told him I could not treat my donation as a matter of personal kindness."

A sensation was caused in counsel for the Governor when they announced that they did not intend to dispute seriously the charge that seven checks received by Sulzer at the time he was collecting campaign contributions had been received by the brokerage firm of Boyer, Grinwold & Co. as part payment for stock.

Close connections between Mr. Sulzer and Wall Street were shown. Governor Sulzer gained a point in his favor when by a vote of 49 to 2 the court gave permission to witnesses to say whether or not they expected Sulzer to use their campaign contributions for actual political purposes, or for any use his discretion might dictate. At least one witness stated that it was common knowledge that while Mr. Sulzer was running for Governor he was practically penniless.

Attorney John B. Stanchfield, counsel for the managers, hotly resented this testimony, claiming that Sulzer had $40,000 on deposit when elected.

Edward M. Brady, president of a brass company, who contributed $100 to the Sulzer campaign fund, testified he had destroyed all evidence of his contribution after the Governor had been impeached "to avoid trouble."

Engineer Doherty Expires Suddenly

Man at Throttle in Stamford Wreck Victim of Heart Disease.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Sept. 26.—Engineer Charles J. Doherty, who was at the throttle of the New Haven road express train which was wrecked at Stamford, June 12, when six persons were killed and many injured, dropped dead of heart failure at his home early today.

Since the wreck Doherty has been at his home in this city. Following his release from custody by Coroner Phelps of Bridgeport he obtained employment for a contracting concern working men here running an engine, as the railroad company had refused to reinstate him despite the fact that he had been absolved from criminal responsibility for the wreck at Stamford.

Doherty was almost a nervous wreck for a time after the accident and it is believed that the strain was the cause of his death.

Benton Not to Run as Independent

Declares, However, He Will Not Congratulate Gardner.

Colonel Beffen will not be an independent candidate for Governor. Neither will he send congratulations to Congressman Gardner. He said today.

Colonel Beaton said he authorized no one to take out or circulate papers for him.

"I am going to support the Republican ticket," he said.

Clams from Lynn Marshes Kill Boy

Spencer McNair, the thirteen year old Lynn boy who ate germ-laden clams from the Lynn marshes, died today in Union Hospital, Lynn. "I'm fighting, nurse," he said last night. When he recognized his inevitable, he said, "I'm tired fighting. I've got to give in." The boy ate the clams three weeks ago and became suddenly ill. Health officials believe that the clams contained typhoid germs.

Worried Over Wife, Took Chloroform

Everett Twombley, twenty-seven, of No. 20 Orange street, Chelsea, was found in his bed overcome by chloroform fumes today. At the Frost Hospital he said that worry over the disappearance of his wife had kept him awake nights. To get a little rest he soaked a sponge in chloroform and laid down with the sponge on his face.

One in Every 400 Is Postal Employe

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Approximately one in every 400 inhabitants of the United States is employed by the postal service. Tabulation by the Post office Department show that on June 30 last there were 58,021 postmasters, 115,415 assistant postmasters and postoffice clerks, 1,454 watchmen, messengers and laborers and 20,920 city letter carriers.

Maine Girl Kicked to Death by Horse

ELLSWORTH, Me., Sept. 26.—Knocked down and kicked to death by a horse just brought home by her father, R. H. Jordan, was the fate of Miss Grace Jordan, aged twenty-one, at her home in Waltham last night. She was to have been married in a few weeks.

THAW'S LAWYERS THREATEN TO ENMESH RICH NEW YORKERS

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 26.—The Thaw case took a more sinister turn today when one of Harry's lawyers threatened an expose involving prominent New Yorkers.

This expose, the lawyer said, had not been considered until the Thaw defence had been driven to the wall by what it styled the "desperate and unscrupulous fight put up by the other side."

STATEMENT BY THAW COUNSEL.

This statement by one of Thaw's counsel, outlining their new determination, was as follows:

"Echoes of the Thaw case will be heard for years after Harry is free.

"We are driven to a stand by Jerome's tactics. We will open up a line of defence that has been barely suggested so far. Its ramifications will enmesh some of the best known names in New York. Before the banishment of facts, which we shall have for presentation several names which have hitherto stood for solid respectability will be shattered.

"The existence of a coterie of frightened men in New York city, to whose efforts in the past six years the imprisonment of Harry is due, will be disclosed before long.

"It will be shown that the so-called 'savings' of Thaw about being persecuted are no delusions of an insane man but a reality.

"We did not propose to take this step now, but the desperate and unscrupulous fight put up by the other side drives us to it.

Trail New York Lawyer.

It was learned today that counsel for Thaw has had detectives on the trail of a well-known New York lawyer, who is suspected of being employed by the opposition to Thaw.

There are two plans in view for exposing this lawyer, if necessary.

One is to bring direct legal action

BOY BANDITS LOOT SOUTHERN EXPRESS TRAIN

COTTONDALE, Ala., Sept. 26.—A young man and two boys were being sought today by more than 100 armed deputy sheriffs and farmers as the robbers who held up the Alabama Great Southern fast express train at 1 a. m. near Gilderlie. The three young bandits stole the front section of the train, and after a wild run of thirty miles blew the express safe and escaped with $50,000.

Deputy Sheriff Brown of Birmingham was shot and killed by a deputy sheriff of Montgomery County. The Montgomery posse mistook the other deputies for the bandits and fired.

Special trains carrying deputies were on their way today to the scene of the holdup from Birmingham, Mobile and Montgomery. The last definite report they had of bandits was from Sheriff Palmer at Tuscaloosa, Ala., where the engine and two cars sped through the town at a rate of sixty miles an hour. Sheriff Palmer attempted to flag the train. The bandit who sat in the engine cab ignored the signal. Sheriff Palmer fired. From the rear car came a fusillade of shots in reply.

Mackay Off to Paris with Two Children

Katherine Mackay Leaves on Olympic to Join Mother.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Clarence H. Mackay, accompanied by two of his three children, the Countess de Donvouloir, an old friend of the family, and four servants, has left for Paris. Miss Katherine Mackay, fourteen, sailed on the Olympic, accompanied by a governess. It is thought she will join her mother in Portland.

Mr. Mackay's air is said, was informed by cable of the impending publicity regarding Mrs. Blake's suit. He made up his mind to leave London half an hour before train time.

Lady Molesworth Killed by a Wasp

Death in Unusual Manner Overtakes General Frost's Daughter.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Death in a strange manner today claimed the life of Lady Molesworth, daughter of Brigadier-General Daniel Marsh Frost of St. Louis. She was stung upon the neck by a wasp at Truro on the Cornish coast and within twenty minutes was dead. She was the widow of Sir Lewis Molesworth, Bart., to whom she was married in 1875.

FELKER MAY SET THAW FREE

"Jerome Must Make Good on Dutchess Indictment," Governor's Attitude.

against him, alleging persecution of a man long insane.

The other is to have a New York taxpayer institute suit against the New York State Comptroller, to ascertain exactly how Jerome is being paid in his capacity of Thaw.

The Thaw lawyers find no statute authorizing the State to pay out funds for the retaking of an insane man. If Mr. Jerome's heavy expenses are being paid by the State, the Thaw lawyers feel that this can be stopped.

If the State is not paying Jerome, then the inference will be inevitable, Thaw counsel say, that some private party or parties is paying. It is thought that, through a suit of this nature, Jerome's income from the State may be stopped and the name of the real backer, if there is such, be disclosed.

It is asserted that Jerome has spent over $125,000 in the past six years against Thaw and that he has expended several thousand since Thaw got outside of New York jurisdiction six weeks ago. Jerome has chased Thaw through two countries and three States.

"Madhouse Millions."

Another point raised is that the insanity statutes of New York require superintendents of all public insane institutions to report to the State Board of Deportation all cases of non-resident insane.

Last year twenty non-resident insane were deported from Matteawan alone. From all over New York 1,300 were deported. Thaw's lawyers ask why no effort was made to deport Thaw. If twenty inmates of Matteawan could be deported why not Thaw, they ask.

A big fund—what Harry's mothers styled the "Madhouse millions,"—has been at hand, in the estimation of the Thaw counsel, to keep Harry immured within the walls of Matteawan the rest of his life.

The belief is strong here that Governor Felker will refuse Jerome's request for the extradition of Thaw.

It is definitely known for the first time that Felker will call on Jerome to make good his assertion that a secret indictment was returned against the Matteawan fugitive by the Dutchess County Grand Jury.

May Refuse Thaw Plea.

Thaw's attorneys reiterate their charge that Jerome was bluffing.

If Governor Felker finds that no secret indictment has been returned, he will, in all probability, refuse the extradition request on the ground that bad faith was shown.

Thaw's lawyers insist that a probe of the Jerome claim will insure Thaw's freedom.

"When the gubernatorial searchlight is turned on, and the doings of the Dutchess County Grand Jury brought to light," said one of Thaw's attorneys today, "it will be seen that Jerome's claim was without foundation, and that an indictment against Harry was actually refused by an overwhelming vote of the jurors."

Former Governor Stone of Pennsylvania charged that Jerome made the conspiracy claim as a mere subterfuge to get the prisoner back to Matteawan. Jerome's exact words, in reply, have been variously quoted. Taken from the official stenographer's transcript of the testimony today, they read:

Jerome's Exact Words.

"It seems to me, Mr. Stone from Pennsylvania, it seems to me very strange that there should have fallen from your lips any reference to what is taking place in Poughkeepsie. It is true that no evidence appears here that an indictment has been found. It is also equally true that no evidence appears that it has not been found.

"The fact is, which I have a right to know as the deputy Attorney General and I am not restrained from communicating it by the laws of our State, that an indictment was found and was signed, but before that indictment was filed a request was preferred by the Attorney General of New York, through me, that the Grand Jury suspend further investigation until I could return from New Hampshire to present to them evidence concerning the instigator of this plot, a man of more importance than any one yet named in the proceedings, and it was after a conference between myself and one of the Grand Jurymen appointed as a committee, that the entire matter was laid over, and that is the history of that.

"The defence has no such facts in its possession as those indicated in Jerome's statement. Thaw's lawyers do not believe such facts exist. They believe they have definite information that the train is quite the opposite of what Jerome would have it appear.

Tuttle Forces Jerome.

They believe it is Jerome's plan, if Governor Felker delays his decision for two weeks, the time for which the Dutchess County Grand Jury has adjourned, to discharge the present jury which they say has proved refractory to Jerome's pleadings, and call another.

The position of Attorney-General Tuttle, who, on Thaw's flight into New Hampshire, assured the public that Thaw could get a "square deal in the Granite State," is said to be that the New York request for extradition was regular at the time of its issuance, and that it is unnecessary for the Governor to go back of this.

Governor Felker, however, is known as a man who in the past has considered justice before technicalities. His friends, therefore, are confident he will disregard Attorney-General Tuttle's reported advice. They feel he will take the point that, while it may not be legally necessary for him to investigate what lies back of the extradition request, that he will consider it his moral duty to find how the request stands today.

Especially in view of Mrs. Mary Copely Thaw, Harry's devoted mother, having charged that "madhouse millions" from an unnamed source are back of the fight to return her son to Matteawan. Governor Felker will see, Harry's friends declare, that justice is done.

Miss Bull, 1st Girl to Fly with Thaw

Society Woman Declares Trip "Great," and Wasn't Afraid.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 26.—Miss Adele Bull, daughter of Charles Melville Bull of Newport and New York, is the first society woman here to make a trip in William Thaw's hydroplane.

"And I wasn't even a little bit afraid," she said after the trip was finished. "It was great. It felt just like I was being carried down a high building in a fast elevator."

Thaw and Stephen McGordon propose to fly from Newport to Staten Island Saturday.

THAW TAKING EXERCISE

Harry Thaw is a great believer in fresh air. Whenever he gets an opportunity he is glad to take a long hike in the country. This photograph of him was taken in the New Hampshire hills after he had ridden out in an automobile some ten or twelve miles.

THAW SANE, DECLARES SEARS

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 26.—The following interesting study of Harry K. Thaw was written by Richard W. Sears, Boston AMERICAN photographer.

Mr. Sears has had unusual opportunities to observe Thaw and declares him a rational man. Here is Mr. Sears' article:

By RICHARD W. SEARS.

Knowing my friendship for Harry Thaw, many friends ask me what I think of him and whether he is sane. The editor asked me to write an article on "Why I Think Thaw Sane." I will start and tell you of my various meetings with him. We have eaten together at the same table, ridden together on trains and walked together, and I have spent hours with him in his room in various parts of the country.

First of all. Many people wherever we go, look for a small, inconspicuous man, who would step up to me and pick lint off your clothes, or do some sort of foolish thing like that. Instead of that, you meet a gentleman—and I mean GENTLEMAN, too—very refined and well educated. He is six feet tall, broad-shouldered, very erect and comes up to you and grasps your hand and meets you as his friend.

There you have Harry Kendall Thaw.

A Typical Incident.

It was only this morning while we sat in the ladies' parlor, an elderly woman passed through the hall and looked into the room at us. Immediately Mr. Thaw jumped up, bowed very gracefully and said "Good morning," and stretched out his hand to the woman, who with tears in her eyes, said:

"Mr. Thaw, I do wish you luck and hope everything will come out all in your favor."

Harry thanked her again and again.

Now the woman had an apron on and was cleaning up the place. He could not have been any more polite or courteous to her had she been President Wilson's wife.

While coming down on the train it was the same way with the "lumberjacks" at the various little stations—men in their overall with soiled hands, but men with good hearts. Harry's greetings to them were just as dignified and polite as with the society ladies who came through from the parlor cars of our train. As you see, Harry is very democratic.

Smoking Car for Harry.

Many of our party got Pullman seats, but not Harry—smoking car for him, where it could be one happy family.

I watched him for hours and every time somebody came up and grasped his hand, you would see that perpetual cigar in his left hand, a grin on his face from ear to ear, and his right hand extended—so pleased.

He is just as interested in the small things that these country people say to him as when our good friend "Mel" Shurtleff and ex-Governor Stone give him a bit of advice or views on his case. When anybody is talking he is interested and is not looking up to the sky or one particular spot. He is looking at you all the time and listening to what you say.

In the dining room here at the Eagle Hotel he will bow right and left to the people he knows.

The sheriff of Grafton County called on Thaw this morning. Harry said: "Oh, rot. You are up near Littleton. I did not have the pleasure of meeting you." Then he invited the sheriff into his room to have a smoke.

Harry has two kinds of cigars—one a Canadian brand for which he pays 6 cents each and likes very much, and the other a local 10-cent cigar.

Gives Sears His Book.

I was speaking to Thaw about three different stories. He says: "See here, Sears, you will be like a pug dog with a little tail. Do but one thing at a time. First we will get one story and understand each other on it, and then talk of the others."

I suggested to him some things about a story I wanted and he said: "The best story is my book of 11,000 words—'Signs of Insanity,' by Harry K. Thaw. If it will help you, I will let you have it exclusively. If you remember, something has been published about this book I was writing and Jerome was interested. Wanted to know what I knew about insanity. He will find out soon.

"There have been books written by men who are ten times smarter than I on insane people and how to tell sane people from insane people. I started to read them, but they were all wrong, so I just sat down and wrote a book myself.

"Sears, will you go over this manuscript with me, as I had not quite finished correcting it when they threw me out of Canada from Coaticook?"

We adjourned to the "Throne Room." It was funny. We had just got going over one page when in walked a local shoe man with several pairs of shoes. Harry said:

"You won't think I'm impolite if I keep on with my work and you fit my shoes?" The man put on one pair. Thaw got up, walked around the room, and then said: "These will not do." The salesman started to say something, but Thaw said: "No! no! no! These pinch me. We will try another pair, please."

"Mr. Thaw," said the shoe man, "I have here a pair of shoes, custom made for a party who never called for them. I think they will fit you." Harry looked at them. "What kind of toes are those?" he asked.

"Mr. Sears, what do you think of these?"

"Some class," said I, as I picked up one of his old shoes.

"Please don't," he said. "Those old shoes do not enter this affair at all. There is no style to them. I don't know where I got them."

He then tried the new pair, walked around the room and said: "These are two inches too long. Those toes!"

"Those have the receding toes," began the shoeman. "They—" "Yes," broke in Harry, "in the fourteenth century, Charles the Wise to Charles the VI. used to wear shoes with toes pointing up to their knees. Take them off! We are behind the times."

He tried on the last pair and was satisfied with them. He asked the clerk how much they were. When told the price, $3.50, Harry asked where they were made. When told in Rockland, Mass., he said:

"Wipe for another pair for me. Those are splendid."

Thaw has a thorough knowledge of stocks and bonds. Most of his money is invested in Standard Oil.

Before closing I want to mention our auto ride Thursday afternoon to —even Jerome, but his every-day actions are those of a rational man.

and old who wished him luck. When we came to a big vacant field Harry asked the sheriff if he could not stop and walk around the field.

Outwalks the Sheriff.

The sheriff consented, but after going a short distance Mr. Drew apologized and said: "I'll wait here for you; you're going too fast for me."

Officer Stevens, with Mr. Rice, his secretary, accompanied him through the fields to the banks of the Merrimac River, where Thaw pulled off his coat, threw it over his shoulder and viewed the surrounding country.

It was a most interesting scene when they returned—Harry with his coat over his shoulder and the men, each with a bunch of golden rod, walking beside him. Harry took long strides and with arms extended breathed deeply the air of freedom.

I leave it to your own judgment, am I right when I say Harry Thaw is sane? I will admit that he has his peculiarities like the rest of us —even Jerome, but his every-day actions are those of a rational man.

Men who bought Vorenberg's clothes 40 years ago trade with us today, and so do their sons and their son's sons. Three generations of loyal patrons sing our praises and have helped us make this old corner famous for good clothes—for big values and for righteous dealings.

Each year we have profited by the shortcomings of the previous one—each season we have bettered our clothing—our values—our store conditions. All our experience, our energy, our skill, has been brought to bear on the values we will present to you this season—the greatest in our career.

It is with pride that we ask you to come to the House of Values and see a greater variety—more pretty styles—more fine clothing—more value—than you will see in any other store in New England.

Men's Suits

The Best You Ever Bought for

$12.50

Any merchant would be justified in selling these suits for $18. They have all the style, the quality, the attractiveness that you can find in any $18 suit. We have worked pretty hard to produce this special, and we feel a little "chesty" over it—you will recognize the values when you see them.

Our Fine Suits at $18

If clothes with a distinguished air appeal to you, you will experience lots of pleasure in seeing the hundreds of styles in our fine hand-tailored $25 suits which we are featuring this season for $18, others at $20 to $35—We show 10 styles where others show one.

A $15 Top Coat for $10

Here's a swagger English model in either black or Oxford Vicuna, splendidly lined and well tailored—a coat that is worth $15 of any man's money, serviceable as it is stylish and as appropriate for a theatre party as it is for street wear and business purposes.

Other Coats $15 to $35.

Boys' Blue Serge Suits $2.95

Here's a good $5 blue serge suit from American Woolen Mills fabric, in Norfolk style, with peg top pants—ages 7 to 17.

Boys' Rain Coats $2.48

Tan Cantonian Silk Rain Coats, absolutely $4.00 value, ages 6 to 14

Men's Rain Coats $3.45

Absolutely waterproof rubberized slip-ons, worth $5.

The Love Story of Harry and Evelyn Thaw

CHAPTER XXIX.

"Quips and cranks and wanton wiles,
Nods and becks and wreathed smiles."
—L'Allegro.

New York almost forgot the actual shooting of Stanford White in a whirlwind of shocking allegations which were made against the dead architect and against several other prominent New York men.

Names other than that of White were not mentioned, but the newspapers managed to intimate enough—by giving streets and buildings and associations—to give well-posted New Yorkers a pretty clear idea who was meant.

The gist of all this talk was that a coterie of immoral or even "immoral" men existed in the city, whose chief purpose in life was the luring of young girls. These men, according to the stories, were experts in entertainment and in devising artistic and novel amusements along sensuous lines for their jealously-guarded gatherings.

Talk went so far that orgies and debaucheries smacking of the degenerate Orient were charged against these gilt-men and rounders. Clergymen from their pulpits denounced the gatherings. Editors published bitter criticisms. Girls were warned against the insidious approach of the gilded enemy.

Then some took up the cudgels in defence of New York, saying that it was not so bad as painted, that Anthony Comstock was a hopeless exaggerator and that all chorus girls were not the helpless victims of designing men.

But there was so much smoke that opinion finally admitted there must be some fire. The New York man-about-town began to have a care how he conducted himself—for about a week—lest he be accused of being worse than he really was.

Acting District Attorney Nott and Assistant District Attorney Garvan promptly looked into some of these stories. A number of young women from the Broadway stages were seen going to the District Attorney's offices. They—as many of them admitted—were telling things about some rich New York men.

Names given by these girls were not published but it became known that a little ring of eight or nine men was being talked over without mercy. This coterie included artists, bankers and business men, all friends of the dead architect.

Various "stunts" were invented by this gifted group of Sybarites to flick their jaded fancies. At one gathering girls posed as living models of famous paintings.

At another gathering one of the men had prepared a number of twenty-dollar gold pieces which had been packed in ice long enough to be thoroughly chilled. This mad would slip behind an unsuspecting girl in the company and drop one of these icy double-eagles down the back or front of her frock.

The frantic screams of the girl, as the ice-cold coin slipped along her sensitive flesh, caused roars of laughter and the haste of the girl to dissolve so as to rescue the coin was equally diverting to the disembarrassing company.

Other chorus girls came to Judge Olcott, Thaw's lawyer, and related their experiences to him. It developed that the stories told by some girls to Judge Olcott were along the same lines as stories told by other girls to Nott and Garvan, so the general truth of what said was not questioned.

In the midst of this blast of accusation and innuendo against the character of the dead architect there came a bolt from the West.

This defence of Stanford White was spoken by Richard Mansfield White, Stanford's brother. He was a California man of wealth and he started East when he heard of his brother's assassination.

At St. Paul on his journey he was interviewed. His statement flashed all over New York that night was as follows:

I am hurrying to New York to defend my brother's memory is not besmirched and that his murderer meets the punishment his crime deserves.

My brother, Stanford White, was a high-minded gentleman, and not the degenerate creature the Thaws would like to have the public believe, in order that the black sheep of their flock may escape punishment. He committed a deliberately-planned, cold-blooded murder.

I knew of my brother's friendship for Evelyn Nesbit before she became Mrs. Thaw. I knew that my brother helped this girl in an honorable way, just as he did other actresses and artists. He loved art for art's sake and was kindly disposed toward anyone struggling in any of art's many spheres.

STANFORD WHITE NEVER WRONGED EVELYN NESBIT. I'LL TAKE MY OATH. NOR TRADUCED HER AFTER SHE MARRIED THAW.

My brother is dead and the Thaws figure that, only by painting him as a demon and a destroyer of young girls, can they hope for Harry Thaw's escape from the electric chair.

To Be Continued.

EVELYN THAW SAYS "A BOY IS ALWAYS A MOTHER'S FIRST CARE"

Strikingly applicable to the Thaw case just now is the following by Evelyn Nesbit Thaw:

I doubt very much whether any mother is ever entirely in sympathy with her daughter's aspirations.

It has been my experience that the son has invariably been the mother's first care, just as the daughter is inevitably the father's.

This bit of philosophy is an extract from "THE STORY OF MY LIFE," by Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, which begins in the next Sunday AMERICAN.

AS FASCINATING A STORY AS WAS EVER TURNED OUT, AND, BETTER STILL, IT'S FROM REAL LIFE—IT'S TRUE.

Was Evelyn Nesbit Thaw Worth Saving?

Was Evelyn Nesbit Thaw worth saving? Gertrude Atherton, the novelist, startled society by declaring that Evelyn was not worth saving. That statement caused a remarkable discussion. Here are some more letters expressing the opinions of AMERICAN readers:

Evelyn a Human.

The Hearst papers are perhaps doing as much to set people thinking as half the schools in the country.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is a human being, and therefore worth saving. She acted out loathe to the MONSTER, White, through H. K. Thaw.

Evelyn saved Harry from the electric chair by a devotion that revealed the humiliating sad blackness of her past, and when he and his ungrateful family threw her overboard, instead of crying baby, went right to work coining her notoriety into cold cash and just as all the other great ones of this age are doing.

In my opinion she is worth a dozen of the flighty, flickering, golden-garbed goddesses who fool their time away flirting with the fun-finding fashionable fops who assume that pleasure is the chief end of mankind, and that they and their clique are the only and immaculate FOUR HUNDRED.

CIVIL WAR VET.

"Worth Ten of White."

I have read the opinions of many people in the AMERICAN about this question. I do not see how any one can doubt that Evelyn Nesbit is worth saving. There are too many men like White. They may have genius, but they have other traits that offset this which should be condemned.

All that I have read about Evelyn Nesbit shows her to be the victim of circumstances.

I cannot say much for men of the type of White. All they want is to drag some girl down to their level. Evelyn, to my manner of thinking, is worth ten times more to the community than any White.

RUTH C. HANSON.

Swansea, Mass.

"Turned Out Into Cold."

I consider Evelyn Thaw worth saving. I do not think that she will ever gain any more publicity than she did at the time of her husband's murder trial. Think of the unmerciful grinding that she received at the hands of Jerome. Even when she was the trump card for the defence she still faced the lawyers.

What did she receive for this noble stand? She was turned out into the cold by the Thaw family. Even though she had not been requested to stand by her husband, she has done so at all times. She stood by him in a wonderful manner. White's activities in white slaving caused his death, and not Evelyn Thaw.

F. G.

Evelyn Can Answer.

Your verb form presupposes a fact. Let us hope Evelyn Thaw not only was, but is, saved. No one wants to doubt who can help it, and few of us are near enough the subject to proffer a guess or create a doubt. The question presumes she was saved from the lures of one man by his assassination at the hands of another. "Was she worth the price of that sacrifice?" I presume is intended. It was a great price paid under doubtful circumstances, where Virtue did not have much chance to raise its head and where Vice was solemnly redolent. Miss Atherton apparently assumes that White's life was a futile sacrifice in Evelyn's case for no modern reformer or Salem witch could conjure up the idea that any life is not worth redemption, if that be meant if a score of guilty lives were sacrificed. To my mind there is but one person who can answer your perplexing question. That is Evelyn Thaw herself. Works and not words will prove whether Stanford White's life-blood was shed in vain.

HUMANITARIAN.

Evelyn's an "Honor."

Your question is one that can never be answered by an Anglo-Saxon. I am a French woman now living in Boston and, from talking it over with my neighbors, I find that we have very different ideas. For my part I would think it a great honor to have one of my daughters associated with a great artist like White and, in time, I would expect him to leave her for another, like all artists do, and then my daughter would come home to me, marry some respectable man and lead a quiet life.

I see no reason why this whole thing should have happened or why such a fuss should be made about it. The life of the girl would be of little consequence compared with that of the great man. If my daughter chose to go as Evelyn did, it ought not to mean that her profession should be sacrificed.

The Most Style and Quality for Your Money in Houghton & Dutton's Trimmed Hats at $4.98

As the New Man Sees It:

"Several years ago I asked a pretty girl, whose business it was to know about the millinery of the Boston stores, where she purchased her stunning new hat. Important, you may say. I did it, nevertheless. She said, 'I bought it at Houghton & Dutton's.' Why?' I asked. 'Because I think I get the most style and quality for my money there,' she said. I was not surprised, as I had heard many similar flattering remarks, but I considered this artist's opinion authoritative.

"Since coming with this store, having an opportunity to study the millinery in all its detail, to talk frequently with the designers, expert dressmaker, I am more convinced than ever that not only are Houghton & Dutton's prices the lowest in Boston, but their hats are superior in style and quality. I know that they buy their materials, trimmings, model hats and everything else in great quantities direct from first hands at home and abroad. They prefer MANY SALES at SMALL PROFITS to a few sales with great profits.

"I have been told that no other New England store offers such really fine trimmed hats at $4.98, and I am convinced this is an absolute fact. I am also convinced that any one who walks through Houghton & Dutton's Millinery Department, even in its present upset condition, occasioned by rebuilding, will say that the values are truly wonderful."—THE NEW SALES MANAGER.

MEXICANS HOLD AMERICAN NUNS AS PRISONERS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Trapped in the disease-ravaged city of Torreon, Mex., are twenty-seven Sisters of Charity and nuns, unable to flee to the United States because of the bands of rebels that surround the town.

They appealed to the State Department today, through Consul-General Hanna at Monterey, to be taken out "as soon as the fallen can be repaired or other means provided."

The twenty-seven women are members of two orders—the Incarnate and the Incarnate Word, cloistered.

In addition, there are in Torreon, Gomez, Palacio, Lerdo and other nearby towns 111 men, seventy-four women and ninety children, all anxious to escape. The state Department is unable to probe them any immediate help.

MRS. BLAKE SEEKS RETURN OF HUSBAND

Joseph A. Blake, Jr., had returned to New Haven she said.

Plan Reconciliation.

"Some newspapers have referred to my two little boys. One of my boys is a man now. Yes, he is a big man, almost as big as his father. Then we have another son. He is twelve years old. He is with me here."

While Mrs. Blake was speaking to the AMERICAN an authorized statement was being dictated to another reporter by her self-elected spokesman. He said Mrs. Blake did not want the $1,000,000 for which she has asked in her suit. Legal proceedings, he insisted, had been started only in an effort to force a reconciliation between Dr. Blake and his wife.

"Mr. Train is to Portland," said this spokesman, "to prevail upon Mrs. Mackay to use all her influence to urge Dr. Blake to return to his wife. Dr. Blake has shown a willingness to sacrifice his home, his profession and his own happiness to protect the name of Mrs. Mackay. Mrs. Blake, against the advice of her counsel, believed that service of papers on Mrs. Mackay would force Dr. Blake to his senses. She did not expect the matter to become public."

Blame "Gossiping Women."

Mutual friends insist that Mrs. Mackay's interest in Dr. Blake's work was not of such a nature as to warrant a break in the home of either.

According to an intimate friend of Mrs. Mackay, "gossiping" women, bent on ire in the social suffrage campaign, made it a point to telephone ex aggerated, and in many cases, unfounded, stories to Mrs. Blake.

The same persons, it is said, wrote letters to Clarence H. Mackay hailing the names of Mrs. Mackay and Dr. Blake in such a way as to cause a break in the long friendship of the two men.

Finally, so the story goes, Mrs. Blake taxed her husband with being too much interested in Mrs. Mackay. Dr. Blake defended Mrs. Mackay. There was a quarrel, which led to a separation. Because he believed Mrs. Blake had attached too much importance to the stories Dr. Blake, it is said, refused to return home.

"It has simply been a case of Dr. Blake upholding everything to defend the name of a woman unjustly accused," said Mrs. Mackay's friend.

Why Eleonora Sears Must Go to Court

Ordered Policeman from Grounds—So Her Friends Say.

The real reason why Miss Eleonora Sears is to appear in the Beverly Court tomorrow to tell how it happened that she has been driving over Harold Vanderbilt's touring car without a Massachusetts registry came out today.

Here's how it came about.

The time was ten days ago; the place was a private lane out near Pride's Crossing, and Miss Sears herself was the girl.

Enters Patrolman Edward F. Glidden on a motorcycle.

Miss Sears, who was riding on horseback with a young man escort, said to Glidden:

"You'll have to get out. Didn't you see the sign on the tree saying no motor vehicles are allowed here?"

"But I have business here," protested Glidden.

Miss Sears reported Glidden to Chief Woodbury of the Beverly police.

The next Miss Sears heard—her friends say—was when she received a summons to court.

MRS. SUSIE E. TATE, who says all Boston women will profit if she wins her damage suit against a cleansing company.

Judge Wentworth of the Municipal Court is expected to give a decision on Monday in the famous case of a Mrs. Susie E. Tate's "baggy coat."

Mrs. Tate says it was a lovely coat when she sent it to the cleansers. When it came back—"goodness me," she says, "it looked like it bulged out—it was a sight."

So Mrs. Tate sued L. H. Daley & Co. the cleansers.

"I am fighting for principle," says Mrs. Tate. "Every woman in Boston will profit if I win, because it will establish the fact that a cleansing company, or a tailor shop must pay for goods they damage. If I lose I shall appeal."

The case was hard fought. Mrs. Tate had experts who told how the coat had been ruined by the cleaners. There was the coat, lying on a table before the judge. Mrs. Tate put it on in court and the experts pointed out its defects.

The cleansing company also has real ts experts. And did they rebut Mrs? They did, for they blutted—oh, gently but still blutted, just the same—that the rest on the coat no longer fitted Mrs. Tate gracefully and beautifully was because—it is really mean to mention it—was because Mrs. Tate had—er-er-er, grown stout since the coat was built.

"Not so," up spoke Mrs. Tate.

"I haven't varied a pound in several years. My waist line is still twenty-one inches."

"You have changed the style of your corsets," persisted the unbudging attorney.

"It is not so," she replied. "Before I came East I purchased twelve and the supply is not yet exhausted."

Mrs. Ida R. W. Pulsifer of Ancon, Panama Zone, sent on a deposition to effect that the coat was a model of architecture and a perfect fit. Mrs. Mary E. Bernard, a society leader of Oakland, Cal., formerly of Boston, testified along similar lines. "The coat was a perfect fit before it was sent to the cleansers," said Mrs. Bernard, "but it is so different now that I wouldn't recognize it." Evidence of a similar nature was presented by Mrs. W. A. Savory of the Hotel Kempton, Boston.

ELLIOTT TELLS OF "EXPENSES" ON NEW HAVEN

lists of the State House with sums of money for their services. Do you intend to really clean house on the New Haven, tell this horde of alleged and bogus middlemen that the New Haven road will go to the front door of the State House and to the people direct for what it wants?

A—I have no information as to the methods mentioned by you in this question. I intend to present openly and frankly to the Legislature and other governmental agencies and to those the railroads are trying to serve the reasons when the company needs legislation, relief or orders of one kind or another so that it may go on with its work as a common carrier. The principal officers of the company cannot do all of this work themselves, and must delegate it in part to others. They will not, however, delegate it in the manner suggested by the language used in your fourth question. Representatives of the company will discuss matters openly with those who should have the facts and will try to convince them by FAIR MEANS of the justice of any request the company may make.

No "Underground" Methods.

Q.—What guarantee have the people of Massachusetts that the day of the New Haven's underground methods are over, that it will ask openly for what it wants and then do as it agrees?

A—I can give no guarantee as suggested in this question except to state that the directors and myself do not want to do business in the manner suggested by you and do not intend to. I believe that the people of Massachusetts and New England will find that IT IS THE EARNEST DESIRE OF THE DIRECTORS AND OF ALL THE OFFICERS TO MANAGE THE RAILROAD IN A FRANK AND STRAIGHTFORWARD MANNER AND TO ATTEND STRICTLY TO THE TRANSPORTATION BUSINESS. On no other basis would I have been willing to come here and assume my present responsibilities, and this is so understood by the directors of this company, who are heartily in accord with this policy.

Tufts Junior Elections.

The Tufts College junior class elections were announced today. The officers are as follows: President, Warren W. Mike of Mexico City; vice-president, George W. Ansell of Syracuse, N. Y.; treasurer, James L. Brown, Jr., of Somerville; secretary, Donald M. Whitney of Somerville; marshal, William B. Richardson of Fisher's Island, N. Y.

MRS. RANTOUL SAYS HUSBAND BROKE DECREE

Mrs. Lois B. Rantoul, granddaughter of James Russell Lowell and wife of Wendell Phillips Rantoul, filed a petition before Judge McLaughlin in the superior Court today charging her husband with violating the court's order and of so long caused the illness of her daughter Mabel by permitting her to eat sour milk, hot pepper soup and bathing in the ocean in stormy weather against the advice of her nurse.

In the specifications Mrs. Rantoul charges:

Rantoul and "members of his family" unreasonably and without justification interfered with plans laid down for the care of the children in regard to receiving a suitable amount of instruction in reading and spelling.

That as a result of all this, and "owing to the ignorant, unwarranted and unreasonable conduct of Rantoul, on August 27, the daughter, Mabel, contracted a high fever, that a physician sent by Mrs. Rantoul pronounced to be tonsolitis and inflammation of the ear.

That shortly after this Rantoul, "who had continually and intentionally throughout the Summer harrassed and annoyed the nurse, Miss Richardson, without cause, in her efforts to maintain the health of the children, discharged Miss Richardson and ordered her to leave the house, and hired another nurse, all without the knowledge or consent of Mrs. Rantoul."

That Rantoul talked "in a menacing and disagreeable and insulting manner in the presence of Miss Richardson, making abusive and insulting remarks about Mrs. Rantoul, with the apparent purpose of harassing Miss Richardson and making it impossible for her to discharge her duties or remain with the children."

That Rantoul's conduct has been such as to render it impossible for Miss Richardson or any other nurse selected by the mother to care for the children at his house.

Mrs. Rantoul says in the petition that Miss Richardson is a highly competent nurse and that she intends to employ her.

Mrs. Rantoul therefore asks the court for an order either by way of attachment or otherwise against her husband on the charge of contempt or violation of the interlocutory decree, and prevening him from further violation of the decree and forbidding him from interfering with the children and to protect them from a repetition of such conduct, and to insure his compliance with the spirit and letter of the decree.

The court took the motion under advisement.

Exceptionally Low Fares To California

and

North Pacific Coasts Points

These low fares are in effect via Rock Island Lines, and tickets will be on sale daily, September 24 to October 9, 1913.

The Rock Island is the logical route to take—one has the choice of three interesting routes. Through sleeping cars daily from Chicago, St. Louis and Memphis, via El Paso—the direct route of lowest altitudes—the line of least resistance. Daily service via Colorado and Salt Lake—the scenic route of the West.

Rock Island famous dining car service is provided on all through trains. Before you go let me quote you fares and help plan an itinerary comprising all the most interesting features of the Golden West. S. L. Parrott, General New England Agent, 288 Washington St., Boston, Mass. Tel. Main 2240.

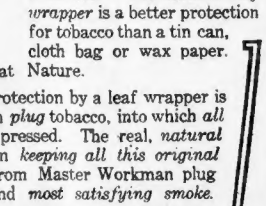
Nature Doesn't Put an Orange in a Tin Box

The orange skin is a better covering for an orange than a tin box! The natural leaf wrapper is a better protection for tobacco than a tin can, cloth bag or wax paper. Man can't beat Nature.

This natural protection by a leaf wrapper is possible only in plug tobacco, into which all the natural flavor has been pressed. The real, natural flavor of tobacco depends on keeping all this original moisture in the plug. So from Master Workman plug you can get the sweetest and most satisfying smoke.

Don't forget this: chopped-up, sliced or granulated tobacco must dry out. Dry tobacco bites the tongue. But when you cut each pipe-load fresh from a plug of Master Workman, you get a cool, sweet smoke. Get a plug of Master Workman today and prove this yourself.

Master Workman PLUG TOBACCO



Better Quality and one-half ounce more of it—than in any other form 2½ oz. 10c

TWO RADCLIFFE GIRLS PLAN TO WED FILIPINOS

The coming marriage of two Roxbury women, Radcliffe graduates, to two Filipino musicians on the U. S. S. Georgia, became known with the filing of the intentions of one couple, and the announcement that the second pair will take out their license today.

Fortunato Villafor will wed Miss Beatrice T. Kahle of No. 9 Hammond street, Roxbury.

Serafinhno Ascenio and Miss Mary Somers are the other couple.

Miss Kahle lives with her parents on Hammond street, and the Manila girl also lives with them. Last December Mr. Kahle was ill, and a young Filipino, who has been a friend of the family for some time, called to see him. With him was Villafor, and Miss Kahle declared that it was love at first sight. Only two weeks ago Villafor accompanied Ascenio to the house, and he, too, fell in love with Miss Manuis, a brunette of twenty-two. Ascenio soon won her hand, and there was talk of a double marriage among the friends of the young women.

Miss Kahle's father is a native of Germany, and her mother was born in Spain. Miss Kahle, however, was born in Brooklyn, and came to this city about fifteen years ago. She is about twenty-four. She studied at a school of design in New York and attended Radcliffe, which she left about two years ago to engage in business.

Butchering Calves Causes Shortage

Bell Declares Africa Will Be Next Source of Beef.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Shortage of beef supply in England, as in the United States, is due to a considerable extent to the butchering of breeding stock, according to G. A. Bell, assistant chief of the Division of Animal Husbandry of the Department of Agriculture, who has just returned from a four months' trip through Europe studying livestock conditions.

Mr. Bell expressed the opinion that after Argentina, now the meat supply of England and some other countries, shall have begun to fence her ranges and restrict the cattle territory, the world supply would shift to Africa.

Say Manuel's Bride Is Ill from Poison

Plot of Portuguese Republicans Now Suspected.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—Poison administered by plotting Portuguese Republicans may have caused the sudden and mysterious illness of the deposed King Manuel's bride, she who was Princess Augusta Victoria of Hohenzollern. Such is the persistent rumor here. The mystery is deepened by the silence of the Queen's closest relatives and of the physicians.

The royal patient is attended by Professor von Romberg, a specialist in internal affections and a toxicologist. Yet it is officially announced that she suffers from a severe attack of influenza.

Somerville Man In Downtown Fight

Abraham Shansky of Raymond street, Somerville, was arrested today on a charge of assault and battery preferred by Abraham Berg, twenty-three, of North Elm street, Dorchester. Berg claimed he was standing on the sidewalk gazing up at the workmen on a new Tremont street building when Shansky came along and demanded what he was looking at. Berg told him it was none of his business. Then the fight began.

Special Storm Warning Issued

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—A special storm warning was issued today from the United States Weather Bureau. The disturbance will move northeast from Texas and will probably be accompanied by heavy winds.

Ice Cart Hit by Car; Driver Hurt

A large cake of ice was knocked from an ice wagon Friday by an inbound electric car at the corner of Dudley and Magnolia streets, Dorchester. The ice hit the driver, John J. Heffernan, thirty-five, of No. 101 Norfolk avenue, who was walking behind the wagon. He was considerably injured.

Detectives Guard British Chancellor

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Half a dozen of the detectives attached to Scotland Yard were today detailed to guard Chancellor David Lloyd-George from suffragette attack when he leaves tomorrow on a brief vacation.

'NOTHING TO DO' MAN GIVEN DAY OFF BY JUDGE

Hugh A. Purdy of Quincy avenue, Watertown, says he is the original "nothing to do till tomorrow" guy.

Mrs. Mary G. Purdy, his wife, who keeps a boarding house at the Purdy home, says her husband is lazy. She sued him for non-support before Judge Low in the Waltham District Court today, telling the court how she and one girl fed forty boarders while Purdy looked on.

Well, how do you put in the time? the judge asked the defendant.

Said Purdy: "Here's my schedule:

I get up at 4 a. m.
I build the fires.
I grind the coffee.
I prepare the oatmeal.
I prepare the breakfast.
At 5:30 I call the wife.

After breakfast I wash the dishes.

After that I clean out the chicken coops for forty hens and gather the eggs, when there are any.

Then I peel potatoes, prepare the vegetables for dinner. After dinner I carry up coal, then wash the dishes, clean up the house, prepare the supper, wash the dishes, and——

"Stop," cried Judge Low. "You have done enough. You are discharged. You had better take the day off."

Seek Wilson's Aid in Tariff Tangle

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—With the aim of gaining some suggestions which would aid in smoothing the path of conferees on the tariff measure, Senator Simmons, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, held a conference with President Wilson today. He said he had not asked the President to interfere in the present deadlock but that he hoped that the executive might be able to offer some plan through which all difficulties could be straightened out.

Sues His Jailer for Hose Bath and Shave

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The mental anguish produced by being stripped of clothing and given a bath with a hose, after which came a head shave and the loss of his mustache, is worth $5,000 to Joseph W. Croft, he alleges in a suit which he has filed against Louis F. Zinkham, superintendent of the jail here.

Mr. Croft, on declining to pay his wife alimony, had been turned over by the court to this district jailer, who sent him to the workhouse, down the river at Occoquan.

Sally Shute, Noted Cheesemaker, Dead

FRANKLIN, N. H., Sept. 26.—Mrs. Sally Shute, a lifelong resident of Sanbornton, died yesterday of old age at her home, Shute Hill, that town. She was born on Shute Hill eighty-six years ago. She was a daughter of Noah and Molly Smith Shute and was the widow of Noah J. Shute, a distant relative.

Mrs. Shute was famed as a maker of domestic cheese, the product of her dairy commanding a high price in the local market.

BOARDMAN ACCUSED BY POLICEMAN

Hastings Boardman, son of T. Dennis Boardman, the real estate broker, was fined $15 for recklessly driving his automobile and $10 for operating the machine without light, today, in the Salem District Court.

Boardman, who paid the fines, sat reading a newspaper throughout the proceedings. He finally arose and stated that he was not driving recklessly and that the time of his arrest was too early for lights.

Patrolman Thomas H. Sheehen of Manchester-by-the-Sea, where aBardman has a Sumer home, testified that Boardman said to him, "Forget it or I'll report you to the selectmen."

O'MEARA WILL LOOK INTO CASE OF BREWER GIRL

Police Commissioner O'Meara has decided to investigate the charges for disbarment of Miss Ella Brewer of Canton, daughter of Elias Brewer, the elevator manufacturer, with charges Patrolman John Horgan of Ditchton St., City Square, City Prisoner with assaulting her and using unnecessary roughness when he arrested her.

Miss Brewer charges that she sat in a cell and heard officers, bringing in the store they would testify against her in court, though charged with disorderly conduct, and her relatives say she never visited liquor.

Commissioner O'Meara sent his answer today to Attorney Fred L. Norton, who, as counsel for Miss Brewer, filed the charges against Patrolman Horgan. While suggesting three alternatives at the disposal of Attorney Norton in prosecuting the charges, Commissioner O'Meara concluded with, "The department inquiry will be made in any event."

Mr. O'Meara advises Attorney Norton that his letter of charges may be referred to the commanding officer of Division 15 for inquiry and a written report. Should the report of the commanding officer contain sufficient basis for charges, Patrolman Horgan might be tried before a trial board. Another alternative is for Miss Brewer to present a formal complaint in her own name. Commissioner O'Meara advises Mr. Norton that this complaint would be heard by a trial board and that the girl's counsel would be permitted to examine witnesses and present arguments.

Attorney Norton said today that he will decide the method of procedure after a conference with Miss Brewer.

Two Men Hurt as Car Hits Wagon

While a wagon was being driven along Washington street, near Melville avenue, Dorchester, today, it was struck by an inbound electric car, No. 1088, and its occupants, Hugo McGovern, forty-five, of No. 251 Cabot street, Roxbury, and Dennis Kane, fifty-four, of No. 5 Ohio street, Boston, were thrown into the street. Kane received a bad cut on the ear and McGovern was injured about the head.

6 Wealthy Chicago Women Sit as Jury

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Six wealthy women in silks, drafted from a social register, acted as jurors for the trial of persons believed to be insane. They were: Mrs. John H. Barnard, No. 1,325 Astor street; Mrs. William T. Stewart, No. 1,244 Astor street; Mrs. J. C. Walking, No. 199 Lake Shore Drive; Mrs. William B. Rodgers, No. 64 Bellevue place; Mrs. William M. RICH VAN ALEN GIRL WON BY A POOR MAN

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Miss May Van Alen, heiress to millions, a New York and Newport society girl, is today on her honeymoon with Griswold Thompson, a comparatively poor man. They were wed after a remarkable courtship.

Other suitors had been able to invite thousands of dollars upon the girl who had millions. Williams could give her no costly gifts, but could offer her unbounded love instead of wine and champagne, he could buy no steam yacht, perhaps not even a small shore, but could offer fashionable hotels and restaurants.

He had no high-powered motor car, so the girl's guardians were no trailed into the country, taking lunch with them. He bought her peanuts and impressed the boarders of the high-priced cafes his rivals had given her.

Their marriage was almost a secret affair. Only a few people knew that the bride, whose income is $75,000 a year, and who owns magnificent residences in the most exclusive sections of New York and Newport, was to wed a budding American Napoleon of industry," whose yearly income might not be as much as that of one of the favored Van Alen servants.

The ceremony occurred in St. George's Church, Hanover square. The special license was obtained only three days ago. Mrs. Thompson's mother, now deceased, was the elder sister of John Jacob Aster, who perished on the Titanic, so that the bride is granddaughter of the late Mrs. John Jacob Astor, long undisputed leader of New York's "400."

Many had thought Miss Van Alen's hand in marriage. One unsuccessful suitor is said to have shot himself. As the favored daughter of James J. Van Alen, she has been chatelaine of Rochow Hall, the splendid residence of his immensely wealthy father who recently announced his intention of coming again to America to live.

Waldo Ousts Three Chinatown Police

Found New York Gambling House Running Wide Open.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Commissioner Waldo made an excursion into Chinatown just before midnight and said he was incensed at the condition in which he found things. He acted at once, and before he left the district he himself had taken the shields away from Captain Frank A. Tierney, who is commander of the precinct, and Sergeant Owen J. Keegan and Patrolman Louis Gray. The three men were suspended at the commissioner's orders.

In his short tour about Chinatown Commissioner Waldo found many things which displeased him. On Pell street, particularly he thought things were in bad shape. He found three Chinese gambling houses running full tilt, and with no interference attempted by the police.

Washoe Smelter Shut Down 2 Weeks

BUTTE, Mont., Sept. 26.—The Washoe smelter, the largest in the world, will be shut down for two weeks, beginning about October 1, so that necessary repairs can be made, according to an announcement today. This will mean a reduction of about 10,000,000 pounds in the October copper output. The men will not be idle, as they will be put on the repair job.

Cheap Substitute for Radium Found

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Details in regard to the Mesothorium, set forth in Germany by a new cancer cure, show that, even though a cancer cure may not have been discovered, a substitute for radium which is far cheaper has been found. It is made from a South American sand, which the Germans are reported to have plans of cornering.

DELAY BURIAL OF ACTRESS IN PARIS MYSTERY

PARIS, Sept. 26.—Police Prefect Penon today forbade the burial of the body of twenty-year-old Pierrette Fleury, actress and cabaret singer, who died from an overdose of ether in her apartments in the fashionable suburb of Levegiuel. A scandal is threatened, as servants in the singer's employ have told the police of wild orgies which took place in the apartments of her young relatives. Names famous throughout Europe and America were mentioned, but the police said that these would be kept secret.

Despite her extreme youth Pierrette had run the gamut of human vices. She was an inveterate user of ether and smoked from 300 to 1,000 Turkish cigarettes a day, soaked in opium. So thoroughly was her system saturated with the drug that it required an immense quantity to affect her.

When she was found dead a quart jar which had held ether, but which was nearly empty, was found at her side. A linen sheet was wrapped about her head and the bed was filled with ether-soaked wads of cotton.

The dead girl was one of the leading figures in the night life of Paris. She was a statuesque brunette of striking beauty. She had inherited from several rich men and squandered nearly a quarter of a million dollars annually.

Baby Boy Drowns in Artificial Pond

EIGHT CHILDREN BELIEVED TO BE DEAD IN FLAMES

QUEBEC, P. Q., Sept. 26.—It is believed that eight children were burned to death in a fire which started at midnight in a three-story structure in St. Francois street. They are the children of Ulrich Trudel, owner of the building.

There were five other families living in the same house. The father and mother and an older son were saved from death, although severely burned. No trace has been found of one of the girls of the family. One child was dropped from the third-story window and struck his head on the curbstone. It is believed he will die.

CASSIDY TELLS OF POISON IN 'FRENCH' PEAS

Five hundred cases of French peas valued at $100,000 were seized by the government in Trenton, N. J., the other day. The importers have been called upon to show cause why the peas should not be condemned as unfit for food. Mr. Cassidy explains today why the government seized this consignment.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

You remember how the peas used to look down on the farm when picked fresh from the stalk and served with the Spring lamb on the Fourth of July. That was a dish sacred to the day and long to be remembered.

Those peas used to be of that color so well known that it gave to a shade of green the name of pea green. Pea green, as all housewives know, is of a lighter shade than grass green.

How then is it possible for us to order in the restaurants at any time of year, peas whose grass green color rivals in brilliance the shade of the most verdant of early season grass?

It's this way. The food dopers have for so long a time preyed on the eye of the public to the detriment of the stomach that the public almost demands that a pea be green in color. If it isn't, it excites suspicion.

We are accustomed to having our fashions in dress for women come from Paris. The next step logically was that our fashions in food should come from the same city. And as far as the pea goes, Paris has set the fashion as to its color.

"Made in Paris."

Men, too, have bowed the knee to the exclusiveness of Paris trademarks. Witness the hatbands bearing the legend, "Made in Paris." That it may have been Paris, Me., or Paris, Ky., made no especial difference.

Menu cards of fashionable hotels are all in line. When the diner wants to eat some green peas it tickles his vanity to read on the menu instead of good old English, "green peas," the French words, "petits pois."

These peas came under Dr. Wiley's ban several years ago when he found that their beautiful green color came from their being treated with sulphate of copper. Since then peas so treated have been barred by the government.

The U. S. Dispensatory says copper is poisonous. It says it used to be given internally in epilepsy but it is never used now INTERNALLY EXCEPT TO PRODUCE VIOLENT VOMITING AND THEN ONLY IN SMALL DOSES.

Yet this is the stuff the food dopers use to produce the greenish tint to imported canned peas. This is the stuff the dopers want you and me to put in our stomachs.

Do you wonder the government seized the stuff as unfit for food? Yet your Massachusetts State Board of Health believes it all right for use in food.

Read the Labels.

Else why can you or I go out and look in dozens of store windows throughout the city and read on labels of canned or bottled foods, "preserved with sulphate of copper?"

Perhaps it is too much to expect of the State Board of Health to be up-to-date enough to know that the Federal government has condemned the use of sulphate of copper as a preservative.

The U. S. Dispensatory says: "Preserved copper salts are not coated with tin should not be used in pharmaceutical or culinary operations, for although the metal uncombined is inert, YET THE RISK IS GREAT THAT THE VESSELS MAY BE ACTED ON AND A POISONOUS SALT FORMED."

Wouldn't it be well for your stomach's sake to use it as well as you would a dish used in the kitchen or the laboratory? Or is this too radical a request to make of you housewives.

Pope Is Ordered to Remain in Bed

Pontiff Suffering From Exhaustion From Overwork.

ROME, Sept. 26.—Although it was announced that Pope Pius X. is not suffering from illness in any form, Dr. Amici of the Vatican staff of physicians today refused to allow the Pontiff to arise to say mass. It is said that the Pope has been showing signs of exhaustion from overwork lately.

Firemen Condemn Uniform as Disguise

Score Boston Police "Spotters" for "Outrage."

NEW BEDFORD, Sept. 26.—The methods of the Boston Police Force in using firemen's uniforms to disguise themselves in securing evidence against the Atlas Athletic Club, were roundly scored by the Massachusetts State Firemen's Association in session here.

Captain James McKissock of Lowell said that a law ought to be passed to prevent the uniform of a fireman from being worn by any person other than a fireman. He thought it an outrage and shame that the uniform of a fireman should be used to cover the body of a spotter.

President Fox declared that any such happening should not have occurred and a fireman's uniform should not be used for any such purpose.

Prince's Playmate Breaks Mary's China

Cricket Ball Smashes Queen's $10,000 Dresden Figure.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—A "gillie" named Barnes, while playing cricket on the Western lawn at Balmoral with Prince John drove a cricket ball through the window of the room in the castle where valuable old china which Queen Mary is taking care of for the Dowager Empress of Russia is stored.

The ball smashed a Dresden figure worth $10,000 which was presented to the Empress by the late King Edward. Curiously enough a replica was broken at Windsor two days before King Edward's death.

$10,000,000 Widow' Sues Valkenburg

Wife Asks Divorce, Charging Desertion by Aged Husband.

PUTNAM, Ct., Sept. 26.—Mrs. Van Valkenburg, known as "the $10,000,000 widow," has begun suit for divorce. Colonel Philip Van Valkenburg, an aged banker of New York.

Mrs. Van Valkenburg claims that her husband deserted her in January, 1910, three months after they were married in Greenwich, Ct.

The suit is the second airing of the marital troubles of the pair. Recently Mrs. Van Valkenburg brought suit for separate maintenance, asking $50 a week and alimony of $100,000. Shortly afterward Mr. Van Valkenburg instituted bankruptcy proceedings in New York. His bankruptcy suit was withdrawn.

Hebrews Observe Holidays Next Week

New Year's Will Be Followed by Day of Atonement.

Strict observance of the Jewish New Year and Day of Atonement, to-morrow, 3 and 11, will be made by all the Hebrews of Boston; large gatherings being expected at the synagogues, temples and halls were services will be held.

Hebrew people who stay away from school during the holidays will not lose their marks. Manufacturers have been asked to allow men and women of the Hebrew faith leave of absence during the holidays without danger of being discharged.

Thousands of New Year's cards are being sent abroad by Hebrew residents of Boston. Many in return are being received.

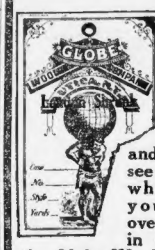
Mystery! Who Bent Harpoon on Statue?

Shaft on New Bedford's "Whaleman" Pointed Towards Ground.

NEW BEDFORD, Sept. 26.—The bronze statue of the whaleman presented to the city by Col. Isaac Rodman, Union Veteran, and unveiled on Decoration Day, has been found to have been so damaged by the ground at a right angle, as a point was cast from the mold.

The discovery was made by Sculptor Bringhurst. The point at a right angle, accounts for many visitors. The statue was set up a month ago in front of the Public Library. The tool shaft is said to lack in thickness and would require more than ordinary human strength to bend it.

MACDONALD'S MODELS



This is the photograph of one of the Globe Woolen Co.'s tickets. Insist and demand to see this ticket when ordering your suit or overcoat. Walk in and ask for the Globe Woolen Co's overcoatings that I consider $50 values and which I make to your order for

$10.75

Shirreffs Worsted Co. I have ten styles of Shirreffs Worsteds, dark gray, dark brown, and neat tasty stripes. No tailor in the land shows tastier effects than these goods which I now show. You get the benefit of my buying. I am forcing the season for business. Suit or overcoat in these goods made to order by the high-priced tailor or clothier would cost from $40 to $50. My price, suit or overcoat, to order,

$10.75

No. Adams Mfg. Co. The goods are as fine a yard of cloth as ever graced mortal man's hide, and as fine styles as are possible for cloth designers to produce. They are a fine soft finished worsted fabric, and the tailor who gets $50 for them does not cheat his customer. My price for these fabrics, suit or overcoat, to order,

$10.75

I am now ready to show the results of Mr. J. Caul Macdonald's two months' work. In my window I display seven or eight models that I want the public in general to see. No finer specimens of sartorial art are to be found in this city. I want to call your attention to the new English shapes, style of the lapels, fulness of the breast, tapering of the waist, the sleeve head and the general hang of the sleeves. These models were made up on regular patterns designed by Mr. Macdonald. Where I show rather bright effects in the window, it is done to bring out the artistic points of the garment. I have inside, thousands of styles, blues, grays, blacks, browns, olive greens and a general variety of colors. Coats in the window were made up by my best tailors and may be a little extreme. They are made up 36 breast. Any customer that size desiring the window coats can have same on the undressing of the window, he to make the selection and we will measure him for the trousers, and the price is the same as marked on the garments in the window.

I announce today the purchase of a large wholesale woolen dealer's stock. These run three or four pieces to a style. The great majority of this stock is Globe Woolen Co.'s high grade suitings and coatings. These goods are the ones used by the regular $40 to $50 tailors, and I state positively that the quality and style would warrant such prices. I don't want these classed merely as woolens, because the majority are worsteds of a fine quality, and worsted to me means Dublin twisted long wool staples. I take orders on these, suit or overcoat, to order $10.75

There are a great number, probably eight or ten styles, of Shirreffs worsteds, made in Fitchburg, Mass. These goods I guarantee all worsted. Don't confound them with the cheap, shoddy cassimeres that are classed as all wool. They are the goods used by the $40 to $50 tailors. My price, suit or overcoat to order, on patterns designed by J. Caul Macdonald, the highest priced designer in the country. $10.75

In this line is a great range of North Adams Mfg. Co.'s worsteds. This ad. will cause a good deal of question, but, Mr. Reader, these goods were sold to me with the original tickets on, at my price, so that I am enabled to make a slight profit on volume of business and sell these goods, that are sold by the $40 to $50 custorn tailor, at a price of suit or overcoat, to order $10.75

Standish worsteds. I think the finest goods made in this country are made in Plymouth, Mass. under the label of Standish Worsted Co. Among the tailoring trade they have the reputation of using the greatest amount of long Australian yarn, and they carry the finest class of merchandise. To prove the labor of the merchant tailor, they have a feeling and a handling that can be found in no other goods. I have ten styles Standish unfinished worsted cheviots. These goods are easily the quality used by the $50 suit tailor. My price, suit or overcoat, to order $10.75

Understand me, these goods are all made up in my own daylight shops, in my building upstairs, where you can see them in process of construction, and every garment bears the Union Label.

LADIES! I had a very successful season on Ladies' Johnny Coats last year, and with the attention of Mr. Macdonald I can assure the ladies of Boston of the finest raglan shoulders, split sleeve shoulders and the latest Balmacan effects in coatings. I make these to your measure, mannish style, for a price, overcoat to order, $15.50. The goods shown in my window are the same for men and women . . . $15.50

Mannish Serges sold by the yard —1.00 yard up.

Bulgar Drummer Boy Returns a Hero

Reaches Boston After Being Rescued on Battlefields by Prince.

Boris Dimitroffitch, seventeen, a drummer boy in the Bulgarian army, and a hero of twenty battles, today reached his home in Boston, which he left two years ago to fight for his country.

Boris is wearing the uniform of an officer of the Bulgarian army, and a medal as a Knight of the Order of Lincoln, which he won for valorous bravery in the battle of Kirk Kilisseh.

The last was found on the battlefield by Prince Boris, a son of the Bulgarian King, after the battle, with a deep wound in his chest. The young Prince carried him to the rear, bound up his wound and gave orders himself that the wounded hero was to receive every possible care.

CHAMP CLARK HOPES GERMANS WILL AID FAIR

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Speaker Champ Clark has added the following message to the special edition of the German Journal, which will be published in Berlin next Sunday:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—It is greatly to be hoped that the government of the German Empire will finally conclude to participate in the Panama Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, celebrating the completion of the most stupendous engineering undertaking in the history of the human race, a beneficent accomplishment of which men have dreamed and for which they have hoped since the day when Balboa first looked with delight upon the Pacific ocean.

Americans are very fond of the Germans. Indeed, several millions of our people were born and bred in the Fatherland and are among our best citizens. All of us, whether of German extraction or not, would be delighted to welcome representatives of the German empire to our shores.

(Signed) CHAMP CLARK,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Edison Declares We Eat Too Much Beef

Says That He Will "Take No More Vacations Without Work."

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Thomas A. Edison, discussing public affairs for the first time in several weeks, said the currency measure should be supervised by capable bankers and there should be four empires, at New York, Chicago, the South and Far West. He said we eat twice too much beef.

He said he would take no more vacations without work, as "vacationitis" had caused his illness. But he would see that it did not happen again.

Radcliffe Girls Must Go to Prayers

College Guild Names Committee to Keep Track of Students.

Because Radcliffe girls have been negligent about attending the daily chapel services, the college guild has taken the matter up and is bent on seeing that the students attend the prayers regularly.

The guild has appointed a number of girls from each class on a committee whose purpose is to keep track of the students who are absent from the chapel services.

MARION LEONARD, 16, who was found working in Revere as a domestic.

"Housework Better Than Schoolroom"

Dedham Girl, Feared Kidnaped, Located in Revere.

"I ran away and got work as a domestic rather than go to school," today declared sixteen-year-old Marion Leonard, who was found in Revere and returned to her parents' home after fears of abduction had led to a three-days' search.

Miss Leonard was found at the home of Mrs. Mary Alness, No. 19 Doug ave nue, Revere, whose advertisement she has answered. Her father, Herbert F. Leonard, of McDonald street, Dedham, had searched the woods about his home, for the girl was last seen walking through them.

C. L. U. in Campaign for Women Voters

An energetic campaign to secure the registration of women voters for the School Committee contest in January will be made by the Boston C. L. U. A circular will urge that every woman who can be registered should avail herself of the suffrage and will give plain directions regarding the manner in which women are registered.

WOMAN TELLS OF 'WHO'S WHO' HISTORY FIGHT

Because the genealogy of New England families found in properly sorting the activities of her ancestors at Bunker Hill, Mrs. Lavinia M. P. Brackett of No. 50 Pleasant street, Brookline, refuses to pay the $125 bill of the publishers.

One of her ancestors commanded troops in the repulse of the red-coated soldiers of the royal throne. Another marshaled the colonial forces of the rear.

Suit has been inaugurated in the Superior Court against Mrs. Brackett, who is seventy.

Mrs. Brackett asserts that she was duped in the spirit of her transactions with the agent. Upon delivering the volumes, she said, an agent of the company departed from the house with her check before she had an opportunity to peruse the history. When she scanned the reference to the Brackett and Prescott families, she was so shocked, she says, by the discrepancies that she immediately ordered payment withheld on the check.

"We love history," said Mrs. Brackett.

"My father, Frederick William Prescott, was an able student and a gentleman of the school that is passing. His father, in turn, was a Harvard graduate, and had entered upon a career of prominence that was shortened by a fatal illness. William H. Prescott, the historian, has written his fame. Before from came General Oliver Prescott and Colonel William Prescott.

"General Prescott was famous at Bunker Hill. With true colonial courage he hurled his troops at the assaulting redcoats, and was responsible for repulsing the Britishers who attacked the breastworks he defended. Colonel Prescott was assigned to marshal the troops at the rear, an inconspicuous but very important duty.

"My Grandfather Prescott married Margaret Hiller, whose father, Joseph Hiller, was a distinguished clergyman. Her folks were among the founders of Salem, and one of her ancestors was the first Collector of that port. We have connections with Abbott Lawrence and with the Lowells. My husband's predecessors were equally important, from the viewpoint of history.

"There came a book agent to my home. He knew, he said, somewhat of my lineage. He was publishing a genealogy of New England families, and he desired to include the Brackett and Prescott. I gave him considerable data relative to the present generation and some concerning the Prescotts of Bunker Hill. He promised me this data would be assembled and contained in the genealogy. Our contract was that in return for this compilation of the family history, which was to be published, together with the portraits of my husband and my father, I was to pay $125.

"The contract was broken by the publishers. Comparatively little of the family history has found its way into the book. One of the Bunker Hill Prescotts finds no mention. Another attracts little notice, and the Hiller family is also slighted.

"I paid $60 for one engraving and $50 for another. My friends say they are worth 60 cents and 50 cents, respectively. The binding of the book is imperfect, and they are not worth the price."

New Haven to Sell Hampden to B. & M.

Find Solution Over Trying to Get Assets in Tangible Shape.

SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 26.—The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad will sell the Hampden Railroad, built useless at an enormous cost, to the Boston & Maine Railroad, it is declared here.

It is planned to dissolve the Hampden Railroad corporation and its assets and liabilities will be assumed by the Boston & Maine Railroad through purchase. Assignment to this effect is expected within a few days.

The transaction is believed to be the solution of putting the assets of the much discussed Hampden Railroad in tangible shape and getting from the line some return on the investment. The move will do away with the proposed lease of the road and furnish a good argument for the petition now before the State Public Service Commission for the right to make a $2,500,000 bond issue.

Fill Gatun Locks to Test Canal Gates

PANAMA, Sept. 26.—It is hoped that all the chambers on one side of the Gatun locks of the canal will be filled today, in which event one of the dredges will probably be passed through into Gatun lake. The filling of the locks is largely a test of the gates.

Marshall Supports "Santa Claus" Mail

Tells Girl Sending Gifts to Poor Free Is Good Idea.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Olive May Wilson of Jenkintown, Pa., seventeen, who is advocating free postage for Christmas presents for poor children, has interested President Wilson in the project. She showed him the following letter from Vice-President Marshall:

Miss Olive M. Wilson, Jenkintown, Pa.:

Dear Miss Wilson—In spite of all dogma and all doubt, the world believes that the sweetest baby ever born was born in a manger at Bethlehem. The world cannot properly celebrate His birthday unless it remembers that every baby born is entitled to some sweetness and light.

I welcome with great pleasure, therefore, your proposed distribution of Christmas gifts to all the needy and unfortunate children. Such service will not only bless him who takes, but also him who gives. The world will be far better for this labor of love. I hope the Congress of the United States will make it possible to distribute such gifts without payment of postage. Faithfully yours,

THOMAS R. MARSHALL,
Vice President.

SAY WILLIAMS SOUGHT ESCAPE FROM MESHES

That George E. Williams's "double notes," amounting to $50,000 or $100,000 were given out first through the blunder of a clerk in July, while Williams lay on his deathbed in a Woburn sanatorium, became known today.

The notes were renewed each time for smaller sums, indicating that Williams was fighting for an ultimate escape from his financial troubles.

Prior to his illness no one in his office had known of their existence, and many persons believe that he never intended them to leave the private compartment in his safe. Now that they have been put on market the makers are liable for them.

And many of these makers are exerting every effort, in consequence, to conceal their property or dispose of it in such a way that they may plead inability to pay them.

It is claimed a professional man who denies his signature to a Williams note and who claims that he was never helped by Williams, bought an automobile the same day the note was dated.

MRS. ISABEL A. CLARK, who says she tried to kill herself because "no one had a place for me when I tramped Boston looking for work."

SOUGHT DEATH AFTER FIGHT TO SECURE WORK

By CONSTANCE WILLIAMS.

Attempted suicide by asphyxiation is the police blotter record of Mrs. Isabel A. Clark of No. 84 West Rutland Square. The police further say that she will recover. But not one word of the experience of this wage-hard woman of thirty-seven do the police give. That was left for others to discover.

Many young women have come to Boston looking for work in the past. But none of them found themselves confronted by a more heart-breaking task than this would-be suicide.

"I tried, oh, so hard, I tried to find work," she sobbed, when asked to tell her story. "No one seemed to have a place for me. I had to choose between slow starvation and sudden death. I was so tired. And now, after all, even the long sleep has been denied me.

"The struggle was not so hard, the road more smooth than that which lies before me now, when first I came to this great city. As a younger girl I gratefully found work as a waitress. Later, even the meanest labor in the kitchens of the Boston restaurants was denied me.

"For almost a month before I sought the long sleep I had been living on the generosity of strangers—people, many of whom were almost as poor as I. My last cent had gone for food and shelter. I was desperate. The awful hell of nothing in store for me. It was easier to die than to live.

"Week after week I have tramped the streets of Boston, looking for work. I went to the employment agencies, but they could not help me. At the big hotels, in the restaurant kitchens, at the great office buildings, it was always the same. Everywhere I met with disappointment. There was no place for me, nothing but misery and suffering.

"Girls in the country districts dream of life in a great city as one continuous round of light, laughter and music. I also thought of such things in the girlhood of long, long ago, I know better today. Life in Boston is impossible for an out-of-work woman, when the first blush of youth has left her cheeks.

"Then came the day when I realized that my strength would not carry me further. Almost insane from privation, I determined to end it all. The police called it an attempt to commit suicide. They do not know. For months I had been dying, slowly, miserably dying. I only wanted to sleep—to sleep when I was tired."

But the long sleep that this weary seeker after work looked for was denied her. The door of her room was broken down by friends who had called to give her some food. They found her lying on the bed, fully clothed. Four gas jets were turned on. Her unconscious form was pallid. She still breathed, and some of the lodgers in the same house sent in a call for the police.

"Notify C. H. Clarke of No. 106 West Concord street, I want to be buried from there. And tell Dunlop—my—my good-by to him," was the farewell message the police found in the room. There also was a letter from Mayor Fitzgerald in reply to a note previously written by her, promising to help find her a place.

Peanut Stand Pays More Than Teaching

"Now Able to Save $200 a Month," Says Professor Munier.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Professor A. E. Munier, recently instructor in French at the Lake Forest Academy, who resigned his job to turn peanut peddler, told some of his experiences today.

"There was too much monotony about the old job. It paid well and associations were pleasant, but I make more money selling peanuts," he said.

"I am trying to forget my books, but the students who know me and to whom I sell my wares will not let me. Often they gather about my wagon and I help them with their French or their Latin or their Greek. In return they buy peanuts and popcorn and chewing gum. Now I am able to put away more than $200 a month."

Once Famed Actress, 83, Rejects Aid

Mrs. Grinnell Shuns Almshouse to Earn Living.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Mrs. Addis Grinnell, eighty-three, who fifty years ago was a leading American actress, arraigned before Magistrate Hylan upon the complaint of her niece, Mrs. Rosie West of Brooklyn, said: "I don't want to go to the poorhouse, I am willing to work."

"I can earn $6 a week washing dishes, and I would prefer that to going to the poorhouse. I will get a smaller room somewhere." Magistrate Hylan paroled her, a social worker to see if she is able to care for herself.

Dartmouth Grows To 1,280 Students

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 26.—That Dartmouth's growth in numbers shown during the last decade has not spent itself was proven by the announcement of an official enrollment of 1,280 undergraduates. Massachusetts is still leading in the number of men sent to the New Hampshire college.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The outing off of the Grand Prize and Vanderbilt Cup races by the Savannah Automobile Club for lack of entries does not necessarily mean that there is no longer any interest in road races. Rather it is that manufacturers and private owners are no longer willing to furnish the attraction and then pay an exorbitant entrance fee as well.

The Savannah Club not only wished the makers to pay a $1,000 entrance fee for each car and the transportation to and from Savannah, but to pay all other expenses as well. In return for this the association would pay the prize money.

When the makers heard this they naturally refused to enter any cars at the expense of sending a car and crew to Savannah would cost somewhere near $2,000 a machine. In the case of foreign cars it would cost considerably more than the above-mentioned sum, and at the most they could win, even if they finished first, was a few thousand dollars, they declined the invitation with thanks.

W. F. Fewell, well-known in this city owing to his prominent connection with the motor industry, is to return to Houston, Texas, as president and manager of the Oakland Motor Car Company, succeeding Mr. Fred Walsh, who on that date retires from his connection. Mr. Fewell has for years been identified with the Oakland Company, having charge of its interests in New York City.

A pleasant trip through the South is to be enjoyed by a party including Mr. and Mrs. E. U. Harrington, Miss Hester Harrington of Winchester and Mrs. H. D. Floyd and children of Lynn. They leave home tomorrow for a three-weeks' trip to Virginia, driving over the road in their Reo cars.

The trip will be made by easy stages, and arriving at their destination they will spend several days on a plantation at Roanoke, Va.

DON'T SCOLD AN IRRITABLE CHILD

If little tongue is coated, surely give "California Syrup of Figs."

Mother! Your child isn't natural, cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated. If it is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When cross, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach ache, diarrhoea, regardless of the little liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative" and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing." Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow. But get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Counterfeit fig syrups are being sold here. Don't be fooled!

ERUPTION ON BABY'S FACE AND SCALP

Began with Feste:, Very Disfiguring. Cut Hair Off in Order to Treat Eruption, Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in Few Weeks.

Sunset P. O., Deer Isle, Me. "My child, when two and a half years old, had several very bad sores as the result of a rash that did not properly break out. Her face and scalp were principally affected. It began with a small foster with the skin inflamed around it. Sometimes several festers would run together, making one large sore. Some of the sores were larger than a silver dollar. The trouble was very disfiguring and troublesome, affecting the general health of the child. I used to cut her hair off, as the sores came in order to treat the [illegible] and with out effect. Then I washed the sores with Cuticura Soap and then applied the Cuticura Ointment, doing this morning and night. The improvement was very marked in a short time and a complete cure was effected in a few weeks." (Signed) Mrs. Frank Lufkin, Nov. 3, 1911.

Drink Schlitz in Brown Bottles

Read what two eminent scientists have to say about light and its effect on beer in light glass bottles.

"In recent years the observation has been made that the rays of sunlight effect a chemical change in beer. For this reason the use of beer bottles blown from colorless glass is diminishing, bottles blown from colored glass being chosen; the amber colored bottles, which, when held towards the light, show the color of light beer, are particularly to be recommended."
Extract from Die Praxis der Bierbraukunde. Published by G. E. Habich, 1883—page 786.

"It appears that chemical changes are produced in the beer, which attains an exceedingly unpleasant taste and a disagreeable odor."
Extract from Letters on Brewing (Vol. 5) published by Hantke's Brewers' School and Laboratories. Dr. G. Thevenot.

Schlitz, when poured into your glass, is wholesome and pure as a crystal spring.

The "Foreward" Model

From fig leaf to frock coat—from toga to trousers—the history of men's wear has recorded no event of greater importance than the perfecting of this new model. The "Foreward" is designed for desk-workers, stoop-shouldered men, and men who carry their heads forward. Never before have clothes been designed that would fit such men properly. And as might be expected, this Live Store is the first to offer such suits, just as it is first in every [illegible] for greater values and better satisfaction.

The designer of The House of Kuppenheimer (a former Boston man, by the way, and at the head of his profession) has spent two years in perfecting the "Foreward." This model does not differ from other Kuppenheimer Clothes in style. It is different only in its proportions—in the way it is cut. The Chester, Suffolk, British, or any other Kuppenheimer style may be cut as a "Foreward."

On men who are somewhat stoop-shouldered, or who carry their heads forward, a regular coat "kicks out" in the back, or pulls away from the neck, or both, necessitating alteration work to secure anything like a proper fit. Here and here only, can such men now come and get "Foreward" find clothes that fit them perfectly in pattern they may prefer.

LOCAL GOLFERS IN LESLEY CUP SERIES TODAY

BROOKLINE, Sept. 26.—Close matches were the rule this morning at the Country Club, where the leading golf experts of New York and Boston are competing in the first match of the annual trophy contests for the Lesley Cup. Great interest was aroused in the play of Francis Ouimet and J. D. Travers, who head their respective teams today.

Twelve foursomes were played over the links for the honorable [illegible] MASSACHUSETTS. [illegible] Mid-Day Club [illegible] Boston entered the contest this morning with more confidence and hope than has ever been the case before. The national and international prominence of its players has naturally caused speculation to run rife as to what will happen, and if Massachusetts gains another victory, it is going to put the holders of the State Cup [illegible] a little to the rear for the golfers of the future.

The most [illegible] absentee is Walter J. Travis, who doesn't like [illegible] so [illegible] foursomes [illegible], consequently, will not be seen at play. [illegible] who are many who agree [illegible] that this form of play is a most [illegible] one, and if there is taking enough to be done [illegible] championship course, the experts have feel that he wants [illegible] he was [illegible] himself [illegible] and Vardon paired together be [illegible] the open championship showed [illegible] was needed to at this form of play [illegible] and Hagen [illegible] and Campbell [illegible] and [illegible] of what golfing traditions of [illegible] and of the motto that "two heads [illegible] better than one," the average player [illegible] 1913 a four-ball foursome the best [illegible] that sort of golf existed, to be played [illegible] of the straight match or medal [illegible] of tournaments.

There is rumor afloat that at a meeting [illegible] the Massachusetts [illegible] A. in the near future [illegible] a committee will be appointed [illegible] fall [illegible] will choose the State [illegible] next year instead of having it [illegible] by [illegible].

The Source of Distinction in

Southwick Suits and Overcoats

FOR MEN AND YOUNG MEN

Suits $25 to $50 Overcoats $25 to $75

Southwick Garments find distinction through dignified innovations in the design.

Through expressive tailoring which leaves the innovations without offense to good taste.

Through fabrics which are never violent in color, yet ever new, impressive, and, now and then, a bit daring. There are but three cities in which Southwick Garments are offered. Cultured Boston, Metropolitan New York and Cosmopolitan Washington.

The taste and needs of the discerning few rather than the provincial many are expressed and defined in Southwick Garments.

To the man with a limited purse

Southwick Suits & Overcoats at $25

These Men's Clothes Shops Are Run on Twentieth Century Limited Time—Right up to the Minute

For this week-end the economy schedule shows red letters on the [illegible]

Young Men's Fall and Winter Suits, in Exclusive Patterns, at $18.50

What's New in MEN'S SHOES?

Lots! Just give us ten minutes of your time and we will show you some pleasant surprises.

First of all, English lasts. Like nearly everything in English toggery, they are decidedly distinctive.

One in wax calf at $6 is particularly attractive.

An unusual shoe is that in mahogany brown cordovan, or horsehide, on the Strand last, at $7.

Gun metal lace and mahogany tan boots, at $5.

YOUNG MEN particularly like our assemblage of $4.00 shoes. Every possible item of style and value is crowded into them.

Rubbers, camping moccasins, putties, riding boots, slippers, dress shoes.

All in a quiet little shop free from the hustle and bustle of street-floor shops. A specialty shop of the highest order

Filene's—Second floor, [illegible]

The manufacturer of these suits (admittedly leader among makers of young men's clothes) said to us recently:

"If I had to sell all of my output of [illegible] to these suits you sell at $18.50 I would [illegible]

Fact is, he depends on higher priced [illegible] to help up the average and "let him out."

In the case of these $18.50 suits we not only demand and get exceptional value from the manufacturer, but we clip our own profits to the quick, JUST TO SHOW HOW MUCH WE CAN PUT INTO A YOUNG MAN'S SUIT TO SELL FOR $18.50.

They are beauties, [illegible] in [illegible] distinctive patterns. Some of the coats have four buttons on straight fronts, which means they button high. The effect is almost military. There are other models, including English. Fabrics rich and [illegible]

Not all $18.50. Some as little as $15; others $22.50 or $25.

YOUNG MEN are gobbling up our REGENT TOPCOATS at a great rate. Homespuns, tweeds, rough cheviots. Loose-fitting, with wide sweep of skirt. $20 upward.

Stocks are now in full bloom. And picking is fine. Your move, young man!

Their Married Life

Helen Dances with the Captain and Has a Triumphant Evening on the Return Trip.

By Mabel Herbert Urner

"Did you ring, ma'am?" asked the stewardess at the door.

"Yes, I want you to hook my gown."

There was to be a dance on deck to-night, and Helen was getting into the shimmering white evening gown she had bought in Paris.

"Wait just a second, dear," as she heard Warren's quick step down the corridor and at the door. "The stewardess is hooking me up."

"There, now, miss, I think that's all right," and the stewardess hurried off to answer another bell.

"Ready to clear out and let me dress?" demanded Warren, as he hung up his steamer coat and cap.

"Yes, in just a minute. Isn't my gown lovely, dear?" with a lingering glance at the mirror. "Do you suppose the sea air'll hurt it?"

But Warren, who was busy laying out his clothes, did not even glance at the gown. "Where'd that steward put my shoes?" he scowled.

"Your dress shoes? Right there in the bottom of the wardrobe. I'll wait for you in the library, dear," and duffing a last touch of powder on her bare neck and arms, Helen threw a white chiffon scarf around her and started out.

Warren could always dress quickly, and in fifteen minutes he came through the library.

As they went into the great white and golden dining salon, Helen was proudly conscious of the glances that followed them. Almost all the men wore dinner coats, but Warren carried himself and his clothes with an air of distinction all his own.

"Dear, you're the most distinguished looking man in the room," she whispered happily when they were seated at their table.

"Now what do you want to eat?" he demanded, frowning at the dinner card, for any personal compliment always irritated him.

When the long course dinner was over, they had coffee in the smoking room, and then went out on the deck, which was decorated for the dance.

The whole length of the deck was bedecked with German and American flags, and there were ropes of colored lights and Japanese lanterns, which threw a red glow far over the sea.

"Oh, it's a wonderful night for a dance," enthused Helen, tapping the waxed floor with her white satin slipper. "I feel just in the mood for it, don't you?"

NOT IN THE MOOD

"No, ate too darn much dinner to feel like dancing," grumbled Warren, who, although he danced particularly well, never cared for it.

"Oh, dear, please don't be prosaic to-night," pleaded Helen, glancing almost curiously at a girl who was standing by the rail, looking dreamily out at the moonlit waves, while a young man leaned toward her with an unmistakable lover-like attitude.

The band now broke into a waltz, and several couples swayed off.

"Come, dear, while it's not so crowded."

"No, I tell you it's too soon after dinner," growled Warren.

"Then, perhaps, Mrs. Curtis will give me this waltz?" suggested Mr. Dudley, who sat at their table, and who had come up unnoticed.

Flushing an embarrassed consent, Helen gave Warren her chiffon scarf, and the next moment she was gliding down the deck with Mr. Dudley.

Although she had not danced for months, Helen had the natural grace of the real lover of dancing, and now she abandoned herself to the swinging rhythm of the waltz.

When the music stopped, they made their way back to where they had left Warren, but to Helen's annoyance he was not there.

"Since your husband's deserted you," laughed Mr. Dudley, "you'll have to give the next dance, too."

"Oh, No—No, thank you," murmured Helen, whose self-consciousness made her fear that his request was merely a matter of courtesy.

Just then she saw the Captain approaching. He was sailing at her! Helen glanced around to see if it might be someone behind them. But no—he was coming straight toward her.

"Ah, Mrs. Curtis, you're radiant to-night. May I have the honor of the next dance?" he asked with quaint German courtesy.

Helen knew that to dance with the Captain was quite a distinction. And as she bowed her thanks to Mr. Dudley and glided away on the Captain's arm she felt very conspicuous and self-conscious.

But where was Warren? The distraction of this dance would mean nothing if Warren did not see her. Then she saw him talking with a group of men, her white scarf hanging from his pocket, where he had carelessly thrust it. Twice Helen whirled past him before she caught his eye. He smiled and waved his cigarette.

"It's a great pleasure to dance with so graceful a dancer," declared the Captain gallantly.

Hardly had he released her, when a Dr. Marvix, to whom Mr. Dudley had introduced her, approached and asked for the next dance.

"Having a good time?" Warren asked carelessly, when a little later, flushed and radiant, she joined him.

Helen had hoped he would make some remark about the Captain dancing with her, but as he did not, she could not resist a casual remark:

"Dear, I was so surprised when the Captain asked me to dance. You know we're hardly met him."

NOT SURPRISED

"Huh, the captains on these German lines always dance. It's a part of their job to jolly along the passengers."

"But he said I danced particularly well," flushing at her pique in repeating such a remark, but determined to impress Warren.

"Probably says that to every woman he dances with."

And Helen's innocent pleasure in what she had thought was something of a social triumph, was spoiled by his deprecative comments.

"Won't you dance this with me?" she ventured at length.

"Suppose I'll have to," ungraciously, throwing away his cigarette.

No one danced like Warren, thought Helen, as he glided her skilfully down the now crowded deck. There was the same sureness in his touch, the same even grace in his movements that used to thrill her in those wonderful months before their marriage. Her head came just below his shoulders, and now for a moment she rested her cheek on his arm.

"What's the matter—want to go to sleep?" brusquely.

The instant the music stopped Warren steered her over to the railing with a relieved: "That's enough for me. Too crowded to dance with any comfort."

But almost immediately Mr. Dudley appeared, and asked Helen for the next dance. After that a Mr. Witmer sought her out, and then the Captain claimed her again.

Exhilarated by her unexpected success Helen danced on untiringly. As soon as one dance was over some one claimed her for the next.

"Yes, she does dance well. Her husband's that tall, good-looking fellow—Curtis I think's the name," was a comment she overheard.

Helen's cheeks glowed. It had been so long since she had received so much admiration and attention that she was intoxicated with it all.

For the final waltz, the orchestra played the Blue Danube, which Helen danced with Mr. Dudley. And the wonderful evening was over. Flushed and triumphant she sought Warren who was now lounging in the doorway of the smoking room.

HELEN VEXED

"Well, you'll be good and stiff tomorrow," was his greeting.

Helen knew that Mr. Dudley could not help but overhear this remark, and she could have cried with vexation. It seemed that Warren took special delight in making just such disconcerting comments.

"Every one went into the smoker now, for sandwiches and something to drink. As Helen sat down by Warren at one of the polished tables she caught a glimpse of herself in the mirrored wall opposite.

With a little gasp of dismay she gazed at her dishevelled reflection. Her hair, from which the night air had taken all the curl, hung in a straight straggling locks around her face. Her nose was shiny from warmth and exertion, and her dress was crushed and limp.

"Oh, Warren, I'm a fright!" excitedly. "Why didn't you tell me?"

"Oh! What's wrong?" looking at her indifferently. "Hold on there—here comes your lemonade. Where's you going?"

"Oh, I don't want anything—I'm going down to the stateroom. Don't wait for me. I'll not be back," and by the throes of self-consciousness, Helen rushed out of the smoking room.

When she turned on the lights in their stateroom, she stood studying before the mirror. Had she looked like that all evening?

Oh, why hadn't she thought of her hair? She might have known the dampness would take the curl out. And her dress—It was almost ruined. The sea air had taken from it all its freshness. She could have worn it all one season at home and not hurt it so much. Even her white satin slippers were marred with black smudges.

"What on earth's the matter with you?" demanded Warren, who now flung open the door. "Come on up, they want you to play whist."

"Oh, I can't!" hastily duffing some powder to her nose. "Just look at my hair! Why DID you let me go on dancing when I looked like this?"

"How the devil did I know how you looked? You're so blamed self-conscious that you always think every's looking at you. Hurry up now—slick back your hair and come on. Nobody's going to notice you anyway."

Conspirators BY NELL BRINKLEY

THE bachelor lies at his case. He wriggles his toes in his slippers (which he can leave all night on the piano if he wants to) and swims in clouds of thick blue smoke. He is free of the torment of love. He dreams of no misty luring face. His pipe does not go out or his dinner grow cold. His heart beats regularly and gently. Calm, perfect, unutterable content flows through all the channels of his blood. His eye takes in all women with a fine detached appreciation. And his pulse beats strong and slow. But his peace is doomed. Over his quiet colorless sky of days will be drawn a veil of flame that will blind his eyes and blaze through his once quiet nights. His heart will catch fire and hurt perhaps 'till he will wish to die. His pipe will go out many times and his carefully ordered dinner go uneaten. He will fly from his couch of ease and wander rapidly about like a tortured ghost. And out of the conflagration he will come with one wonder-face seared on his heart.

For there are TWO who plot against him! A fat baby, with soft white wings and a pink chin, and a roguish girl with merciless eyes and a heart that glows and warms with the whispering of Love's breath upon her ear!

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

HERE of late scientists are discovering such large-sized germs in water that it is hazardous for one to get in a bathtub with them unless one has on a bathing suit, and these floating around in the air have names as long as a Russian count's.

It remained for the physician attending Daysey Mayme Appleigh to discover a new variety. In this way the pipe Daysey Mayme at last achieved distinction.

She had planned all during the pious traditions of Lent to give a poker party after Easter, with cards painted with such innocent symbols as rabbits and eggs and lilies as the favors. Then her mother fell sick, and it was given up.

She would give a May day festival, presenting each guest with a copy of "Wild Poems I Have Met" as a souvenir. An aunt died, and it was postponed.

She would give a gala fest July Fourth, the amusement to consist in blowing up firecrackers and occasionally the neighbors, and her brother broke his arm. The party was out of the question.

As the Summer progressed Daysey Mayme grew thin and haggard. Taste was a drawn, tense look to her mouth, such as you read of in the books, and in her eyes there came that hungry, longing look, always hungry, always longing, for what, for what, for what!

She grew so sick she was sent to bed; guests came, her mother sprained an ankle, her father lost all his money, more guests came, and her grandmother died.

Daysey Mayme, in her moments of seldom babbled about receiving lilies, trunks and flowers, color schemes, fees, favors, what's trumps, and I am so glad you came.

The physician shook his head wisely. "She is afflicted with a germ of the most virulent nature. It is called the insectavum scenario festivitorus."

Lysander John turned pale; his wife collapsed.

"Or, in other words," the physician continued, "the Party Germ. Until your daughter gives that party, she will never get the germ out of her system."

OLD FOLKS FIND CROXONE RELIEVES ALL KIDNEY AND BLADDER MISERIES

Drives Rheumatic Pains Away, Few Doses Relieve Backache and Bladder Disorders.

Sleep disturbing bladder weaknesses, backache, rheumatism, and the many other kindred ailments which so commonly come with declining years, need no longer be a source of dread and misery to those who are past the middle age of life.

Croxone relieves all such disorders because it reaches the very cause of the trouble. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the little filtering glands and cells, and gives the kidneys new strength to do their work properly. It neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid substances that lodge in the joints and muscles, causing rheumatism; and makes the kidneys filter and sift out the poisonous waste matter from the blood and drive it out of the system.

It matters not how old you are or how long you have suffered, Croxone is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results. There is nothing else like it. It starts to work immediately and more than a few doses are seldom required to relieve even the most chronic, obstinate case.

An original package costs but a trifle and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case.

Seeking a Husband

Being the Adventures of a School-Girl Graduate in Her Search for a Suitable Mate.

By CONSTANCE CLARKE

I DON'T know whether I ought to admit that I am really seeking a husband. But I think what is my business to others is written in the clear sky above me, so I wonder if it is really true.

Anyway it seems rather a rôle to wish for in such a lottery, and how remote the prize will be! mine. But I am not going to let my ignorance go by, and it is safer to think of every man as a possible husband.

I have just discovered that I cannot fly all the world could marry Dick, and I am not sure that I would want to. But the first time I had any serious doubts about my entire happiness in this state was when I met Dick on the train after one of the season and I really did not recognize him. I had thought him a boy, but I did think he was a most attractive man, and I was quite glad that I had on my prettiest clothes.

Going down to the boat he said rather impressively, "Didn't think I'd get home in all comfort. Had a fine old time. Saw many and tried to get my way with it."

"Oh, what a shame!" he said, next on better acquaintance. "I hope no one was hurt."

"No, we got the price out of it all right," he returned, and I suppose we ought to be thankful for that. But I wanted it to be over, for I don't mean to become one, and I was bored to death with the whole affair. Why, we were going to marry Marian Collins against her will!"

"Hello, Dick," and said, as though the two were on very intimate terms, "some one was telling me that you were last night, Mary Jane?" Does you wonder him well for it, Miss Rose, to speak to me, and I imagined and pretended to look into the conference. Marian is an right, and I think forced her to do it. As we were going upstairs Marian called back, "Good night, Dick."

Does you wonder him well for it, Miss Rose, to speak to me, and I imagined and pretended to look into the conference. Marian is an right, and I think forced her to do it. As we were going upstairs Marian called back, "Good night, Dick."

During the first dances Dick seemed to considerable. Dick's views and to mine were so different that I felt quite forced, and Dick rather well. I fancied he agreed me no better personality, too, and I was really quite beginning me [illegible] when I saw him over in a corner talking and carrying on a lively flirtation with a girl I knew. I wasn't so much annoyed as surprised. Marian [illegible] Dick was engaged to me, and I had always thought him perfectly devoted to me. Of course I was not really in love with him, but I had always supposed that I would be the first girl he would ask to marry him, and I had always thought that I would accept him. I was not at all prepared to have him flirting with another girl, and I felt very much hurt and indignant.

I was standing near the door, and I could see that Dick was trying to get away from the girl he was talking to, and I was glad to see that she was not pretty. Then I saw him coming toward me, and I was determined that he should not think that I cared, so I looked away from him and began talking to a man who was standing near me.

Dick came up and asked me for a dance, but I refused, saying that I was engaged for the next two dances. He looked very much surprised, and I thought he was going to say something, but he turned away without a word.

I was very angry with him, and I was glad that I had refused him, but I was very unhappy, and I felt that I should like to go home. I looked around for Marian, but I could not see her anywhere, and I thought that she must have gone home with Dick. I was very much surprised when Dick came back and asked me for the next dance. I refused him coldly, and he looked very much surprised, but he went away without saying anything.

I was very much annoyed when Marian came back and I discovered that Dick had been dancing with her all the time that he was dancing with me. I was very angry with him for treating me so badly, and I was very much surprised when Marian told me that she was engaged to Dick. I was very much surprised when Marian told me that she was engaged to Dick. I was very much surprised when Marian told me that she was engaged to Dick.

"Nonsense," said Dick, and then a little later, "I was beginning to feel [illegible]

I don't think you have any right to take me for granted like that," I said, in my most impressive manner. "I am perfectly free to take one or myself." I was very much annoyed at the rest of the evening passed without any more [illegible]

As we were going downstairs Marian [illegible] and I thought that I heard Dick say something about me, but I laughed good night to the ladies.

Dick and I walked home and just [illegible] "Did you have a good time, Percy?" he said.

"Yes," I returned, and then just to make [illegible] "Mr. Olds has invited me to go to see New Years with him."

DICK IS PIQUED

"Indeed," said Dick, rather with [illegible] "I suppose you mean Marian's." I answered, and Dick laughed.

A minute later we stopped and Dick helped me out of the car.

"I will call on you to-morrow," he said, as we said good night.

I went to bed in a very cheerful mood as I ran up the stairs. And then I wondered afterwards why I hadn't said something kind to Dick instead of [illegible]

A Woman's Thoughts About Women

By DOROTHY DIX

MAN'S vanity is women's amusement.

There are women who have all the virtues and none of the amenities of life.

The white woman's burden is trying to be beautiful though ugly.

The one compensation of growing is the time that it gives you for fooling.

The truth about a woman is like all the rest of a woman's hair.

The soft-hearted woman is the woman's punishment.

Bumptiousness in woman is the sex appeal.

No woman ever set anything down as a failure that she could make a man think.

When a woman wishes to give another woman a real mortification she asks her to dance.

How could Eve have been so silly as to have gained the world's whole [illegible] last?

The wife and mother idea is indispensable to her [illegible] has yet to be born.

There are two secrets that every woman can keep—her age and what she thinks of her husband.

The most valuable talent that any woman can possess is to be born with the ability to keep without getting her own out.

A woman loves a man for what he is and hates him because of what he has to appear to be.

Make a woman ashamed of her husband or of herself, and he gives a [illegible] in every line.

Only fools laugh at true greatness or at a woman's tears. The one never sees the other in a [illegible] and the second is a [illegible]

Barren Soil

A veteran of the Civil War, talking to his granddaughter, a little lad of eight years, said:

"Became a proposition and a half ago my head was grazed by a bullet at the battle of Fredericksburg."

The little boy looked at the old man's head and then said:

"There isn't any grazing there now, is there, sir?"

The Amende Honorable

"So?" roared Hiram, adding Wiggles to the pen. "I've found you at last. You ruined me a decade at the club with your [illegible] and, to whom you've got something to say."

"All right, Hiram," said Wiggles, "All right, Hiram, I'll apologize to the real [illegible] and I'll apologize to his face."

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were a little stronger this morning. The local market was rather quiet at the start and at the end of an hour was still lacking in strength. Butte & Superior was an active issue, advancing 2%, while Granby rose 1%, Old Dominion 1 and Pond Creek 1¼.

In New York Union Pacific had been in enough demand to send it upward 2¼. Most price changes there were fractional, but the tone was firm. People's Gas was off 1½, despite a Chicago dispatch stating that the annual dividend rate was to be raised from a 7 to 8 per cent, basis and that a new issue of shares would be offered to stockholders at par.

Most Railroads Showed Strength.

Most railroads showed strength when the New York market opened but this was offset by weakness of industrials, especially the copper group. After half an hour's trading a firmer tone prevailed throughout the list. Among the gains were Canadian Pacific ¾, Union Pacific 1, Utah Copper ¾, Reading ¼, New Haven ¼, Central ¼, Great Northern preferred ¼, General Electric ¾.

The losses included Steel ¼, Amalgamated ¾, American Can ⅝, American Smelting ⅝, American ¼, Pullman ¼, Gt. North's Ore ½, Pennsylvania ¼, Railroad ⅛, Southern Pacific began ¼ lower, then recovered and made a gain, but at the end of forty-five minutes was again selling under Thursday's final. People's Gas began ¼ lower, but made up its loss.

The Curb was steady.

Americans in London were irregular. Canadian Pacific was firm there.

Change in Income Tax.

Conferees on the tariff bill have agreed as to the income tax to adopt Co Senate's exemptions on individual incomes of $3,000 and $4,000 additional in the case the person taxed has a dependent wife or husband. The compromise practically puts a premium on matrimony for a single person will have to pay a tax if his or her income is above $3,000 a year, while a married person will not pay any until his or her receipts exceed $4,000. This was a victory for the Senate. The House has proposed to tax all incomes above $3,000.

Perhaps we've put upon the free list and in regard to this it is explained that the House made all plain woven fabrics of single yarn zones, whether bleached, dyed, etc., or not, dutiable at 20 per cent.

The Senate put all these fabrics popularly known as buntings "when not bleached, dyed, etc., the free list. On those which are "bleached, dyed, colored, stained, painted, printed or rendered incombustible by any process" the Senate retained the House rate of 20 per cent.

Chairman Underwood has contended from the outset that the House never would yield on account of the $4,000,000 revenue derived from this product. In the final agreement, however, the House not only yielded on free buntings when not bleached, but consented to a reduction from 20 to 10 per cent. where the fabrics have been bleached or dyed.

The Senate also obtained its rate of 10 per cent. as against the 25 per cent. of the House rate on hose or socks made from burlaps.

The conferees eliminated the "anti dumping" clause, which was a House provision. It provided that if the price of foreign products similar to those produced in the United States is less than the fair market value of the same article when sold for home consumption a special duty was to have been assessed as a penalty for "dumping."

The Senate conferees opposed this clause on the ground that it might prejudice retaliatory action against American products now sold in the same way abroad. The Senate again won.

London Copper Quotations.

When the London copper warrants market opened spot was off 7s. 6d. and futures were 5s. lower.

There is little selling of copper metal. One explanation is: "The lull in buying is due to the fact that consumers are disposed to encourage demand at lower levels as they are well booked up, while on the other hand the consumers are not inclined to enter the market for their requirements while it shows signs of weakness."

There are rumors that electrolytic can be bought as low as 16½ cents a pound. It is supposed to be on a 16⅞ cents basis.

Financial News in Brief.

President Ripley of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe thinks that government ownership of railroads will result from hostile legislation. The Interstate Commerce Commission," he is quoted as saying, "wants to have us earn as little as possible and have us spend as much as possible."

Big employers of labor in England have formed a "defence union" with a proposed guarantee fund of $250,000,000. Their avowed purpose is to protect themselves against "trade union tyranny."

A London cablegram says the Mexican Company intends to raise $4,000,000 additional capital in order to execute a British plan of re-control for the rehabilitation of stations abroad.

Solon Spends Night in Front Vestibule

Doolittle of Kansas Says He Did Not Rest Inside or Out of Home.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—"Where did I sleep? Is my query to Congressman Dudley Doolittle of Kansas, who spent the night in the vestibule of his residence.

There had been a thorough housecleaning in the Doolittle home, so shortly after he went to bed he decided to take a room in a hotel.

Mr. Doolittle made his way downstairs and entered the vestibule at his front door. Forgetting that he had no key to the outside door, he snapped the lock on the inside door and was locked in. There he remained till morning, when he was released by members of his family. Now he says, while he did not sleep inside his home, he did not sleep outside.

Penfield Received by Austrian Ruler

VIENNA, Sept. 26.—Frederick C. Penfield, new U. S. Ambassador to Austria, was received in special audience today by Emperor Francis Joseph.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND, DAILY AND SUNDAY

Relief for the Farmer Is Even More Needed Than Tariff or Currency Reform

The farmer is much more important to the nation as a whole than the manufacturer or the banker, but much less influential, because bankers and manufacturers are organized, while farmers are not.

For fifty-three years the manufacturers have been an object of special solicitude to Congress. The wise policy of protection, joined to American skill and enterprise, has made the United States the greatest manufacturing nation in the world. We are very proud of our pre-eminence.

For fifty-three years, also, the banks have received from our government exclusive and extraordinary favors. They have been permitted to supply money or currency to the people, for the profit of the banks. The result has been a wonderful growth of "banking power," and the average dividend of all the national banks last year was nearly 11¾ per cent. upon capital invested, or nearly 9 per cent. upon both capital and surplus.

But what has the government done for the farmer, and how has the farmer profited?

The government has not aided the farmer at all. The national banks have been forbidden to loan money to farmers. Loans to improve farms have been so hard to get, and so costly when they were secured, that farmers have been kept poor; many have "moved away"; rural population has grown only 11 per cent., while cities have grown 27 per cent.; farm owners have increased only 8 per cent., while tenant farmers have increased 16 per cent.

A farm tenant is usually too poor to buy the farm and often too hopeless to improve it.

So this has come to pass: Our banks, with the benevolent aid of the government, have increased their resources eight-fold. Our manufacturers, also wisely protected by the government, have increased their product six-fold. But the American farmer, on whom all must depend wholly for food and partly for clothes, has increased his production less than 10 per cent., while population was increasing nearly 25 per cent.

Hence the oppressive rise in the cost of living, especially of food. The purchasing power of one dollar, based on prices of 1897, is now about 73 cents in England and France, 79 cents in Germany, and only 69 cents in the United States.

The government sent an agricultural commission abroad last Summer to find out why our dollar has contracted more rapidly than the Englishman's and the Frenchman's and the German's dollar.

It was found that in Germany the farmer borrows from an association of land credit organized under its class name, Landschaften or Ritterschaften. The farmers form themselves into these co-operative societies and issue negotiable bonds, which are eagerly bought by small investors because they are as safe as our savings banks and pay slightly higher interest.

The German farmer thus gets long-time loans at 4½ per cent. The toiler in the city puts his savings into the bonds. The government came to the aid of this system to establish it many years ago. Under its blessings the German farmer has so improved his farm that it now produces more than twice as much per acre as the American farm.

The French farmer borrows from the Credit Foncier, a loan association that had government aid at first, at 4⅜ per cent., for one to nine years, to improve his crops. If the farmer wishes to build on his farm, he obtains through the Credit Foncier a mortgage credit based on the value of his land and the building to be put up. When the building is completed its cost is added to the loan. THE PRINCIPAL OF THIS LOAN CAN BE PAID OFF ¼ OF 1 PER CENT. A YEAR. And the French farmer now produces two and one-half times as much per acre as the American farmer.

Even in Ireland, long oppressed by British laws and absentee landlords, the government finally stepped in. It took vast Irish landed estates at the appraised value, condemned them, paid their owners the appraised value plus 12 per cent., and then cut up these great estates into small parcels and sold them to small farmers, to be paid for on the instalment plan. This land law, which was bitterly opposed by the privileged classes, is transforming Ireland into a prosperous and happy country. History furnishes no parallel to the rapid regeneration of Ireland under the operation of this land bill.

Thus all the progressive and prosperous nations of Europe—most of them monarchies—have made the farmer their first concern. No agricultural country can be really happy and prosperous unless its farmers as a class are so. No industrial or urban population can be contented and well fed, and at moderate prices, unless the farmers reap abundant harvests.

What are the law-givers of our own country mostly concerned about? About a new tariff bill and a new banking act.

The new tariff bill ignores reciprocity, does not open a single foreign market to any American product, does not make two sheaves of wheat or two ears of corn grow where only one grew before, does not encourage a single blade of grass to grow or a single American ship to sail where there are none today. The tariff bill merely reduces and rearranges some tariff schedules. To the extent that it encourages foreign importations it will diminish American production. But it does not increase either employment or production, and it can not affect greatly the cost of living. Consumers will hardly feel it.

The banking or currency measure does many things more important than tariff revision. It curbs the use in Wall Street speculations by a few banks at the financial centres of about 250 MILLION DOLLARS—the reserves of the 7,473 national banks in all parts of the country. It provides an "elastic currency" that will make a more stable interest rate for merchants and manufacturers. Both objects are commendable, BUT THE BILL DOES NOTHING FOR THE FARMER.

In short, the new tariff and the currency measure, which have monopolized all the energies of President Wilson and of Congress for many months, leave quite untouched the most urgent problem now before the country.

That problem is how to provide the average farmer with the means to increase the production of his land. How to lift for all the people the burden of the steadily increasing cost of food.

HIS VACATION

By MINNA IRVING

O! I had a fine vacation, for
I went to Greece and Rome,
And I visited the Rockies
and Niagara at home,
And I saw the rolling Niger, and the lion in his lair,
And the great Sahara Desert with its sun and sand and glare.
Then I viewed the Tower of London and the traffic of the Strand,
And the cottages and castles and the glens of Ireland,
And I felt the gloomy grandeur of the Highlands round me rise,
Ere I skipped across to Russia,
where the snow forever flies.

China next with eyes delighted with its tombs and temples old,
And its mandarins and pirates, and its rice and rags and gold;
And Japan before me passing left a vision fair and bright,
Framed in purple of the iris and the cherry blossom's white.
Yes, I had a grand vacation, just the best that I could seek,
And I saw a lot of countries,
though I only had a week.
I enjoyed it every minute, it was over all too soon—
For I spent it at the movies every blessed afternoon.

Letters from American Readers

THANKS FOR EDITORIAL

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Your paper should be complimented on its able and fair editorial headed "Discrimination Against Jewish Citizens," there does seem to be a class of people who hold up any shortcomings of the individual who may happen to be a Jew as a fault of the race, instead of placing the individual where he may belong in a class desirable or undesirable as it may be. Catholics or Protestants are judged as desirable or proper persons, not because they are Catholics or Protestants, but because they are individually good or bad or proper or improper.

Last September I had occasion to engage board for Mrs. Cobe and myself at a certain Beacon street house, and after making arrangements, price and room satisfactory, was informed over the phone the next morning that while we were personally not objectionable, and that she (the lady of the house) had no objections, her genteel lodgers objected to Jewish people being in the house.

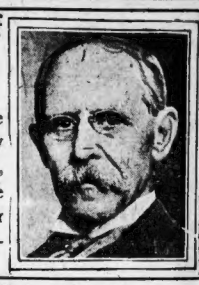
The Jewish population of Boston and New England should vote you a letter of thanks for at least calling this matter to public attention and opening their eyes to the fact that this is the year 1913, and that they are, some of them, living away back in the years of long ago.

I have made many enemies by being personally misunderstood on this question, as I have always by my talk, wherever and whenever it has been called for, to protest against remarks against Jews and Jewish people. I shall call the attention of the Jewish societies of Boston to your fair and able editorial.

Respectfully yours,
ALDEN COBB.

The Problem of Navigating Space

It Will Not Be Solved by New Gas Discovery, but May Be Solved by Other Means in the Future



By GARRETT P. SERVISS

THE statement has just appeared in print that, owing to the discovery by Sir William Ramsay of a gas sixteen times lighter than hydrogen, it may become possible to send a balloon from the earth to the moon or to other planets.

If this could be done it would be the most wonderful thing ever accomplished by man. A voyage to the moon would be an experience of indescribable novelty and infinitely more marvelous than Columbus' first crossing of the Atlantic.

Trip to the Moon May Be Made Possible Some Future Day

But the reasoning on which the statement is based is entirely erroneous, and the fact that it is credited to a "scientist" only shows how ignorant the majority even of educated people are of the real difficulties to be overcome before a voyage in open space can be undertaken.

This seems a good occasion for showing how a trip to the moon could actually be made—provided that we had the means.

Suppose that this strange gas of unexampled lightness were produced in sufficient quantity to charge a balloon, the result would only be that we should be able to go a few miles higher than we can now go with the aid of a balloon filled with hydrogen. It would be impossible for any balloon, no matter how light and buoyant its gas, to escape from the shell of atmosphere that surrounds the earth, and which at a height of a hundred miles becomes so rare that it is practically insensible.

I know that some persons think that if a balloon could be made to reach the upper limit of the atmosphere it would then continue to move, with the momentum acquired by its ascent, out into space, and would go on uninterrupted because the resistance of the air would be gone. But this is a wrong notion.

If we could give to a projectile a velocity of about seven miles per second, then we could shoot it straight up from the earth and cause it to escape from the earth's attraction. But the highest velocity that could be given to a balloon with any gas whatever would be incomparably less than this. Moreover, the velocity would rapidly decrease as the balloon got into the rare atmosphere a few miles up, because its buoyancy would depend upon the relative weight of the gas as compared with that of the surrounding air, and the latter becomes rarer and rarer until it practically ceases to exist. The balloon then would come to rest, being unable ever to get out of the atmosphere.

In the present state of science the only solution of the problem of navigating space appears to be indicated by the property of electric repulsion. If a car could be constructed bearing an electric charge, opposite in kind to that of the earth, then perhaps it could be made to fly away in spite of gravitation, and if the repulsive force could be caused to act continuously it might go as far as the moon, or farther.

But this is only the statement of an idea. We have no means of making such an electrically charged car, and the charge that would be required is so enormous that its production seems impossible. Then, of course, there are other immense difficulties in the way. It is sufficient to state only one of them. We cannot live without breathing that mixture of oxygen and nitrogen which we call air. If a man undertook to cross the airless space between the earth and the moon he would have to carry with him some substitute for air, to say nothing of the cargo of eatables and drinkables that he would require!

Yet I personally have little doubt that if humanity continues for thousands of years to make progress in its knowledge of the laws and forces of nature comparable with what it has made in the last hundred years, and in continuation of the same, the problem of human flight in open space will be solved. But it will not be solved by the use of any gas, however buoyant.

New Gas Discovered Will Aid Possibilities of Flight

The new gas, however—if a new gas such as is described has really been found—may add immensely to the possibilities of flight within the limits of the atmosphere. A relatively small vessel containing such a gas would possess the lifting power of a large balloon without presenting as great a surface to the wind, and it might easily be employed as an accessory to the aeroplane, enabling the latter to rise more directly and to ride the air more steadily. There would be no danger of a fall with an aeroplane furnished with receptacles containing a gas sixteen times lighter than hydrogen. Then, too, the planes might be made smaller and more manageable, while the lifting power which many inventors have been trying to obtain by vertically acting air-screws would be readily supplied.

The Shadow Before

By LILIAN LAUFERTY

A LITTLE maid wrote tragedies,
And all the people questioned, "Lo,
She is a child, a very child!
How comes it she has has suffered so?"
She wrote of life, in accents dark,
The sufferings of a woman's heart,
Of love, of passion's bitter throe,
Of things from her young life apart.
The people marvelled. It was so,
"She is a child—how can she know?"

She was a child, but womanhood
Came, as it does, unbidden quite;
She was a simple-hearted child,
But grew a woman overnight.
The cruel words, the bitter thoughts
So strangely born from that young mind
Were understood—she knew at last
The heritage of womankind.
Then bitterly she marvelled, "Lo,
I was a child—how did I know?"

And now again she wrote—but now
Her knowledge sacred was, and so
It must be hidden from the world
Lest men should look, and, looking know—
So lilting songs came from her pen—
"What pretty little things she writes!"
The people marvelled once again,
"Still older grown, she's lost her power."
I wonder too—do you suppose
Our hearts have their prophetic hour?
